

STATE PARTY NEUTRAL . . .

All Demo Hopefuls Urged To Bid Here

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Democratic State Chairman Hess Dyas Tuesday urged all his party's presidential prospects to test their strength in Nebraska's 1972 presidential primary derby.

The party apparatus, he promised, will maintain a neutral position and act as "a clearing house and an information center" for all the entries.

Dyas expects Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine, Sen. Birch Bayh of Indiana, Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota, Sen. Harold Hughes of Iowa and Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington all to be on the presidential primary ballot.

"I certainly expect anybody who is serious about testing themselves in the primaries will be in Nebraska," he said.

Each of the five senators has made contacts in the state which appear to lead toward a decision to enter the primary next May.

McGovern, who is the only formal entry so far, was scheduled to make appearances in Nebraska next week. But that trip has now been postponed until mid-summer.

While the war in Indochina and the national economy rate as "the two obvious issues" which presidential candidates should discuss, Dyas noted, "they should be prepared to talk to Nebraska voters in rural areas and small towns about agriculture."

Dyas said he cannot promise them that the party will deliver Nebraska to the Democratic presidential nominee the following November, "but it will be close."

"I personally feel that Richard Nixon will be in enough trouble in this state due to the economy, the agricultural economy and Vietnam that, whether we carry the state or not, the margin will be close enough to allow some of our congressional and senatorial candidates to win."

'Will Elect Some'

"I expect that we will elect some Democrats in Nebraska in 1972." A senatorial contest and three House races will highlight the 1972 elections.

Dyas thinks Nebraskans should enjoy the attention which the presidential primary election brings them while they can.

"Our time may be running out," he noted.

"As more and more states go to primaries, the larger states are going to get more attention and we are likely to get less."

Seeking Candidates

On other matters, Dyas said he is urging the party's state central committee to actively recruit Democratic candidates for seats in the non-partisan Legislature.

"We should make sure there's no primary race in which there is not at least one Democrat running," he said.

The central committee will consider that proposal next December when it also decides whether to support Dyas' plan for pre-primary party endorsement of Democratic candidates.

— has also received only passing mention by military editors.

None of the articles has taken direct issue with Brezhnev, since the military, like other sectors of Soviet society, is obliged to support publicly everything that Brezhnev says and what was incorporated into the congress's resolutions.

Military Money Ample

There is no reason to suspect that the military is unhappy with the current allocation of resources. Indications are that under Brezhnev's leadership, the military has received more funds for new rocketry and ships and other needs than it did from any other leader.

But the defense establishment seems concerned that the stated Soviet desire for better relations with the West might cause a sense of euphoria among its own ranks and lead in the future to calls by the civilian sectors for unilateral cuts in the Soviet military budget.

The Krasnaya Zvezda article said, "The desire for peace of the socialist countries does not free their peoples from the necessary development of military affairs and of strengthening their defense."

European Security, Troop Talks Linked

Copenhagen, Denmark (AP) — Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Semyon A. Tsarapkin linked a European security conference with negotiations on mutual and balanced force reductions in Europe.

"We consider this the most practical," the veteran diplomat told newsmen Tuesday after talking for nearly two hours with Foreign Minister Poul Hartling.

In recent speeches, Soviet Communist Party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev had dropped references to the security conference in urging the West to start talks about troop cuts. Tsarapkin's remarks, however, indicated the Soviet attitude remains unchanged.

He said his government considers it most practical to have a European security conference establish a body for the discussion of the "delicate" problems.

Tsarapkin, a former disarmament negotiator and a former ambassador to West Germany, flew here Saturday on a "private" visit timed with the meeting of the foreign ministers of the North Atlantic Alliance in Lisbon later this week.

Sheriff Says Corona Can Get A Fair Trial

Yuba City, Calif. (AP) — Sheriff Roy D. Whiteaker said Tuesday he thinks Juan Corona can get a fair trial in Yuba City for the mass murders of which he is accused. Corona's attorney said he had no present plans to ask for a change of venue.

"I don't see any reason for any change of venue," Whiteaker told newsmen. "I believe there has been more publicity outside this area. For a case of this magnitude, the press has been very professional in their handling of situation."

Public defender Roy Van den Heuvel said he had no immediate plans to ask for a change of trial site. He said he planned to introduce several motions at an arraignment hearing for the 37-year-old farm labor contractor Wednesday but that none would concern venue.

Van den Heuvel said, as he has previously, that Corona would plead innocent.

So far the bodies of 23 transients and itinerant farm workers have been found buried in orchards along the Feather River. Corona is charged in 10 of the slayings.

Whiteaker began using infrared photography from the air in the search for more bodies. He had tried to arrange to get this done by the Air Force, but turned instead to a private firm.

— Infrared photography picks up pinule traces of heat absorbed in the ground and could indicate where the soil has been disturbed, such as in digging a grave.

The 15-to 20-man on-the-ground search for more gravesites extended Tuesday from the J. L. Sullivan Ranch, where 21 bodies have been found so far, for up to a mile to the south — toward Yuba City.

This is a general search for "indentations" in the ground of the sort that led to other graves. Some indentations have been located and not yet dug up because they are covered with irrigation water.

Whiteaker said it will be "a couple weeks" before officers are able to dig there.

Exon Faces Backlash, Ousted Negro Claims

By DON BEAMAN
United Press International

A 41-year-old Negro said Tuesday Gov. J. James Exon has asked for and received his resignation from a post as state youth coordinator.

And in an interview, Robert Rodgers, of Omaha, a 21-year Democratic Party member, said Exon's move would cause a backlash among the Negro voters in the state.

"The time has come that the black person won't carry a party label," he said. "The blacks will be voting for the highest bidder."

'Set The Pace'

The coordinator, hired a year ago by former Gov. Norbert Tiemann, also said the move appears to have "set the pace" for the Exon administration in the hiring of Negroes for state jobs.

"I don't see in this administration where Negroes will have the top jobs — maybe third or fourth — but not the top," Rodgers said.

He said he has written letters

Mushroom Total Up

New York — The United States produces about 189 million pounds of mushrooms a year. Per capita consumption by Americans now exceeds 1.12 pounds a year, double the figure of a decade ago, and it is expected to double again by 1985.

to Democratic Party officials calling the Exon move a "black eye" for the administration and the party. He said he also asks that Exon study his hiring practices.

Should Reconsider

The governor should reconsider what appears to be the "developing policy" for the hiring of Negroes, Rodgers said, or he may be out of a job not only from the lack of Negro votes but "sympathy from the white" voters.

"If they intend to be back here in four years, they better remember that black votes count just as well as the white votes," he said.

Rodgers denied he is making a plea to Exon to reconsider his appointment policies in an attempt to save his own job.

Blacks Looking

"One way or another I'm out," he said, "but blacks are looking for employment and job opportunities just like everyone else and they won't like this."

The circumstances surrounding the resignation, Rodgers said, are the apparent "policy indicators" of the administration.

The resignation, he noted, came shortly after Exon asked for and received Negro Herman Thompson's resignation from the directorship of the State Technical Assistance Agency.

Post On Way Out

And the resignation was requested even though as of July 16 the state youth coordinator's post goes out of existence and the position moves over to the State Labor Department, Rodgers said.

The position would no longer be youth oriented, but would center on manpower planning, he said.

Tiemann "made his thought" on hiring Negroes clear, Rodgers said, by hiring some 15 in "positions of authority." He said Exon has let the holdovers go and in making appointments has hired only two Negroes but in positions of "little or no authority."

One was the Rev. G. L. Collins, who is employed in the State Roads Department as an equal opportunity coordinator, and George Woods as assistant to Frank Soukup, a former state railway commission attorney, appointed to replace Thompson, he said.

Rodgers said he has some plans for his own future employment, but nothing ready for official announcement.

Nixon Praises Capital Police

. . . 'LAWBREAKERS' LASHED

Washington (AP) — President Nixon denounced Tuesday night as "vandals and hoodlums and lawbreakers" the Mayday protesters who demonstrated in Washington, praised the way police dealt with them, and said if it happens again, he hopes it can be handled as well.

Nixon dismissed as exaggerated suggestions that constitutional rights were suspended in mass arrests of demonstrators who swarmed through the streets of the capital on May 3.

He said masses of people attempted to disrupt the government "and they had to be stopped." Nixon said it was done with minimum force and with great efficiency.

News Conference

Police handling of the May protests was a dominant topic at a White House news conference, covered on live television and radio, with four questions put on the matter — three of them in sequence.

Why, Nixon was asked, are the courts releasing those arrested if the police procedures were proper?

Nixon replied that arrest "does not mean that an individual is guilty."

"I think that proves the very point that we have made," he said.

The next question was a statement: the courts are freeing many of those arrested on grounds the arrests were not proper.

'Great Restraint'

Nixon said the entire situation must be considered. He said police were confronted with lawbreakers, not demonstrators. "They dealt with it, it seems to me, with very great restraint," he said.

On other points, Nixon:

—Said the United States now is involved in consideration and consultation with allies on the question of European troop levels. He said when those consultations are complete, the United States will be prepared to move forward to negotiations, with the Soviet Union and other nations, aimed at balanced reductions in force levels.

—Said he believes "the chances for an agreement are still there" in the Middle East.

Women Voters Watch City's Housing Efforts

The City Council Tuesday was put on alert that housing will be a major concern of the Lincoln League of Women Voters at budget time.

Mrs. Jeanne Agee, president of the local group, appeared before the council to urge that the matter should be given attention now.

Mrs. Agee said she has written a letter to the mayor regarding his budget on housing and made public a copy of the letter in her address before the council.

but if the Soviet Union sends large-scale arms shipments to the Arab nations it will increase the danger of war.

"We hope that this is not the case," Nixon said.

He said the Soviet-Egyptian treaty will alter the balance between Israel and the Arab nations only if it leads to new arms shipments.

"We are not going to allow this treaty to discourage us," Nixon said. "We seek normal relations with all the countries in the area."

—Declared that a national offensive is needed to deal with the problem of drug addiction. "It is not simply a question of Vietnam veterans; it is a national problem," he said. But he said the national effort should take special account of the problem of veterans back from Vietnam where heroin is more easily available than in the United States.

—Said he has no plans now for travel to Europe or for conferences with European leaders, but would "of course go anywhere" that would serve the interests of peace. In response to a later question, Nixon said he has no plans for travel to South Vietnam, either.

—Declined to comment on the threatened challenge to his renomination by Rep. Paul N. McCloskey, R-Calif., saying a White House news conference is "not a proper forum" for that.

—Said he will announce on June 10 a list of items cleared for U.S. trade with Communist China. He said it would help end the isolation of mainland China, but "we have a long way to go."

Nixon again rejected the idea of setting a deadline for U.S. withdrawal from South Vietnam. He said "it always comes back to the same thing" — the North Vietnamese offer only to discuss the issue of prisoners in return for U.S. withdrawal.

"We are at this time not going to make any kind of arrangement regarding prisoners that is not going to be followed by action," Nixon said.

He said his administration has considered the possibility of ending the use of draftees in Vietnam, but decided it could not be done now.

In the letter, she said the league believes that local government has a responsibility to establish effective agencies to complement the housing programs of the federal government and the private sector.

"We were therefore encouraged to hear of the interest of city officials in centralizing of the administration of all housing programs, bringing them under closer attention of your office," she wrote in the letter.

Mrs. Agee continued: "Now that the time of planning for the next year and preparing the city's budget has arrived, we have some specific questions to ask of you."

The questions to the mayor, she said, were:

—What plans are being made for centralization of housing efforts?

—What solutions are being considered for the problem of inadequate low-income housing and emergency housing?

—Will there be included in the city budget funding for adequate code enforcement, relocation efforts and emergency housing?

When asked after the council meeting about his comments regarding the letter, Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf said he has just received the letter and wanted to study it before replying.

Sludge Must Go Out
Trenton, N.J. — New Jersey Gov. William T. Cahill signed a series of laws that require most of the state's sewage sludge and industrial waste to be dumped at least 100 miles at sea. Under existing regulations, the corps approves applications for sludge dumping.

COURTS' POWER TO PREVENT RAIL, AIR STRIKES BROADENED . . . Bargaining Dead, Minority Says

Washington (UPI) — The Supreme Court widened the authority of lower federal courts Tuesday to prevent rail and airline strikes by issuing injunctions if the unions fail to make "reasonable efforts" to reach a contract agreement.

The vote was 5 to 4 to allow federal district judges to step in even before the full process of the government's mediation machinery is exhausted.

For the dissenters, Justice William J. Brennan Jr. said the decision would destroy the careful stage-by-stage procedure set up by the Railway Labor Act

Mrs. Golda Meir Disclaims Rumor On Soviet Talks

Oslo (UPI) — Israeli Premier Golda Meir, who made an unannounced visit to far northern Finland Sunday, denied Tuesday that she held secret talks with Soviet officials in a remote hunting lodge during her 24-hour stay there.

"There is not a grain of truth in the story," Mrs. Meir said of the Swedish news reports on her arrival in the Norwegian capital for an unofficial visit.

"But I wish it had been true," she added. "I would have been happy to see the Russians."

Mrs. Meir said she accepted an invitation from a Finnish friend in Tampere in central Finland who wanted to show her Lapland. She said she had accepted because she had 48 hours without a program during her four-day unofficial visit to Sweden.

Tsiranana did not identify the foreign power.

The court's ruling stemmed from a localized dispute between the Chicago and North Western Railway Co. and the United Transportation Union over the number of brakemen that were to be employed on each train.

When federal mediation efforts failed in October 1969, the union announced its intention to strike. The company asked a federal district judge to issue an injunction to bar the move but he refused on grounds he had no power to do so.

The 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals agreed with its finding although continuing a temporary injunction while the company appealed the case to the Supreme Court.

The Railway Labor Act of 1926, which applies both to rail and airlines, provides a three-stage bargaining process. First, management and labor must try to reach agreement by their own negotiations. If that fails, federal mediation efforts come into play.

If these are unsuccessful, the union can serve notice it will strike after 30 days but at this point the president can delay it for another 60 days by setting up a special emergency board to seek settlement.

Army Investigating Reports Of Massacre Near Bong Son

By MORTON KONDRACK
(c) Chicago Sun-Times

Washington — The Army is investigating charges that U.S. airborne troops massacred between 24 and 40 Vietnamese women and children on a beach near Bong Son in September, 1968, the Chicago Sun-Times has learned.

Former Spec. 5 William E. Marhoun, 30, of St. Paul, Minn., charged that the civilians were killed in "two minutes of pandemonium and shooting" by a company of the 2nd Battalion, 503rd Infantry Regiment, 173rd Airborne Brigade.

Marhoun's allegations were corroborated in part by Lt. Col. Anthony B. Herbert, one of the Army's most decorated enlisted men in the Korean War and now one of its most controversial officers.

Marhoun and Herbert's allegations constitute the first charge that a large-scale atrocity was committed by a unit other than ones attached to the Americal Division. Units of that division were responsible for the 1968 My Lai massacre and allegedly to blame for 30 civilian deaths at Truong Khanh II in 1969.

Marhoun and Herbert claim the 173rd Airborne incident occurred after an amphibious assault on a beach east of the Brigade base camp, Landing Zone English, located at Bong Son in Hoai Nhon District, Binh Dinh Province.

Date Undetermined
Neither man could pinpoint the date and official Army records of the operation are classified. But an unofficial 173rd Airborne history on file with the Army's chief of military history indicates that a rare amphibious assault took place in September, 1968.

Marhoun said he was flown to the beach by helicopter hours after the amphibious assault to repair company radios damaged by water.

The troops had gone ashore without contact with the enemy, he said, and were lounging on the beach. The women were selling soft drinks and some children were shining shoes, he said.

"I was handing over the radios that I had laid out on a poncho," Marhoun said. "I have no idea what started it."

When the shooting began, Marhoun said, he dove into a depression on the beach. "I was convinced I was going to die," he said.

When the shooting stopped, "I got up and all the civilians were dead. I counted 24," he said.

Marhoun said he heard that the unit reported a body count of 26 "enemies" killed. Herbert said he understood a body count of 40 was reported.

Marhoun said it was later claimed that the U.S. troops received enemy fire, but no weapons were found and no Americans were injured.

Commanded Battalion

Herbert said he first heard of the incident shortly after he joined the 173rd Airborne in mid-September, 1968. Herbert first served as the brigade's inspector general. In February, 1969, he became commander of the 2nd Battalion.

He said he did not report the incident when he heard about it because "it was only scuttlebutt."

Herbert said. "The discussion was, should the battalion put in for an arrowhead that shows you've been in an amphibious assault. They decided not to do it because there would be an investigation and somebody would ask how come the company took no fire during the assault, but reported a body count of 40."

Herbert said he would have forgotten the beach incident had it not come up again during an investigation of charges he has leveled against his superior officers in the 173rd, and charges the Army has leveled against him.

Herbert, 40, who received three Silver Stars in Korea and is the only American ever to receive Turkey's highest award for valor, accused Maj. Gen. Joan Barnes and Col. J. Ross Franklin of covering up a series of atrocities allegedly committed by 173rd Airborne troops.

Herbert said he did not include the beach incident among 14 atrocities he formally reported because he did not witness it or heard of it from eyewitnesses. Barnes was no brigade commander in September, 1968; he took over later from Maj. Gen. Richard Allen.

EVENTS

IN PERSPECTIVE

By WILLIAM O. DOBLER

What would you tell a graduating class today if it were your privilege to address one? Or, what counsel might you give your own son or daughter as they complete some particular phase of their education and face a new round of personal decisions?

The question is especially pertinent in the case of those young people who are about to enter into the world of business and commerce, who have completed all the formal education they intend to get.

If such young people listened to President Nixon, they might learn, as did the graduates of West Point, that American military strength is still "the keystone in the structure of peace." If they listened to FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, they would be told that there are those who seek to destroy our free enterprise system.

Hoover, it is safe to assume, is an apostle of that free enterprise system. Certainly, he would oppose what he described as the violent tactics being employed against business institutions of the nation.

If the young listened, as many of them did in Lincoln over the weekend, to Rev. Dr. C. E. Mendenhall, they would hear the challenge to "reach out and build a human community whose limits of concern and acceptance are the same for all mankind." He cited some of the shortcomings of today's society and called for change if we are to consider ourselves as just men.

Thus, many words are being heard at this time and the young are bombarded with a deluge of different and sometimes conflicting thoughts. Some of this conflict comes through in looking at the President's remarks at West Point.

He told the U.S. Military Academy cadets that they might be called to serve without receiving civilian recognition "in the measure you deserve." Whether he intended it or not, that remark shows the nature of the turmoil that exists today.

What the President said was that current military activity and foreign policy are not totally supported by the American people. The big question is to what degree the American people take issue with present policies.

Not even the President of the United States can proceed indefinitely with policies that lack public support. The President may believe he is right in his decisions, that the people are wrong, but he cannot win out in such a confrontation.

Ultimately, the President will again face the voters and at that time he must have either majority support for his views or he will find himself voted out of office. It is said that President Nixon is now vulnerable for the 1972 elections and we would say that such an opinion is on pretty solid ground.

But you have to ask yourself what the President is doing wrong and how it might be corrected. The greatest difficulty for Nixon or anyone else who might soon occupy the White House is found in the field of foreign policy.

How to curtail the role of the military life of the nation, how to de-emphasize the military in foreign affairs and how to achieve peace in the face of hostile ideologies throughout the world—these are the matters of foreign policy that would tax the capacities of any man. Young people who contemplate this will find that there are no easy answers, even if everyone agreed that what we are doing is wrong.

As to the domestic institutions of the nation, there are few obvious answers there, either. What you find in both the public and private sectors of life are neither all good nor all bad.

The intelligent individual will attempt to ascertain what needs to be changed and what is better left basically as it is. He will attempt, also, to make change where needed by capitalizing upon the merits of matters as he finds them.

Thus, he will not subscribe to the idea that the free enterprise system is a total failure, for instance, but he will recognize that improvement must and can be made in many areas. Hopefully, today's young people are not to become radicals who believe that wholesale revolution is mankind's only salvation.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE

Determined Lady Libs Are Making Progress

NEW YORK — Memo to male chauvinist bosses: Just because their "bra-burning" movement fell flat (sorry about that, gals) don't think the lady libs have given up.

Instead, they've been checking out law books . . . and now they're fixing to fight for equal pay checks through the courts.

They're winning, too. The Department of Labor says almost 80,000 women have already collected a round $30,000,000 from employers who paid them lower wages because they weren't men.

And that's not $30,000,000 in future raises; that's the retroactive, boss. The pay raises will be extra.

This came out during a two-day conference in New York on equal pay and promotion for women. That's when the gentlemen from business and industry (as if they didn't have enough troubles already) learned what sex discrimination really costs.

It's not exactly what you might call a bargain.

Seems the ladies are catching on that there's something more effective than bouncing along in street parades screaming insults at "male, chauvinist pigs." It's called the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Now, instead of screeching complaints, they file them. In court. And, so far, they've had 234 lawsuits for equal pay settled in their favor. One boss had to fork over $900,000, plus $100,000 interest to 2,000 women. Another paid $126,000, plus $24,000 interest, to 167 women (and 26 men).

Some employers catch on fast. Almost 95 per cent of equal-pay cases are being settled out of court.

It's a beginning. But the ladies still aren't satisfied.

"Their mood at present," according to one of the speakers, "is that of great frustration."

It's the kind of frustration that could make life uneasy for a lot of bosses, because there are now 32,000,000 women with jobs in this country. That's 38 per cent of the labor force.

Up till now, in industry, government and the professions, women (by and large) have been hired last, paid least, passed over for promotion, given the routine drudgery, and fired first when things get tough.

The way they figure, they've been shortchanged millions in salaries since the equal pay act was passed way back there in 1963. They think it's about time it was enforced.

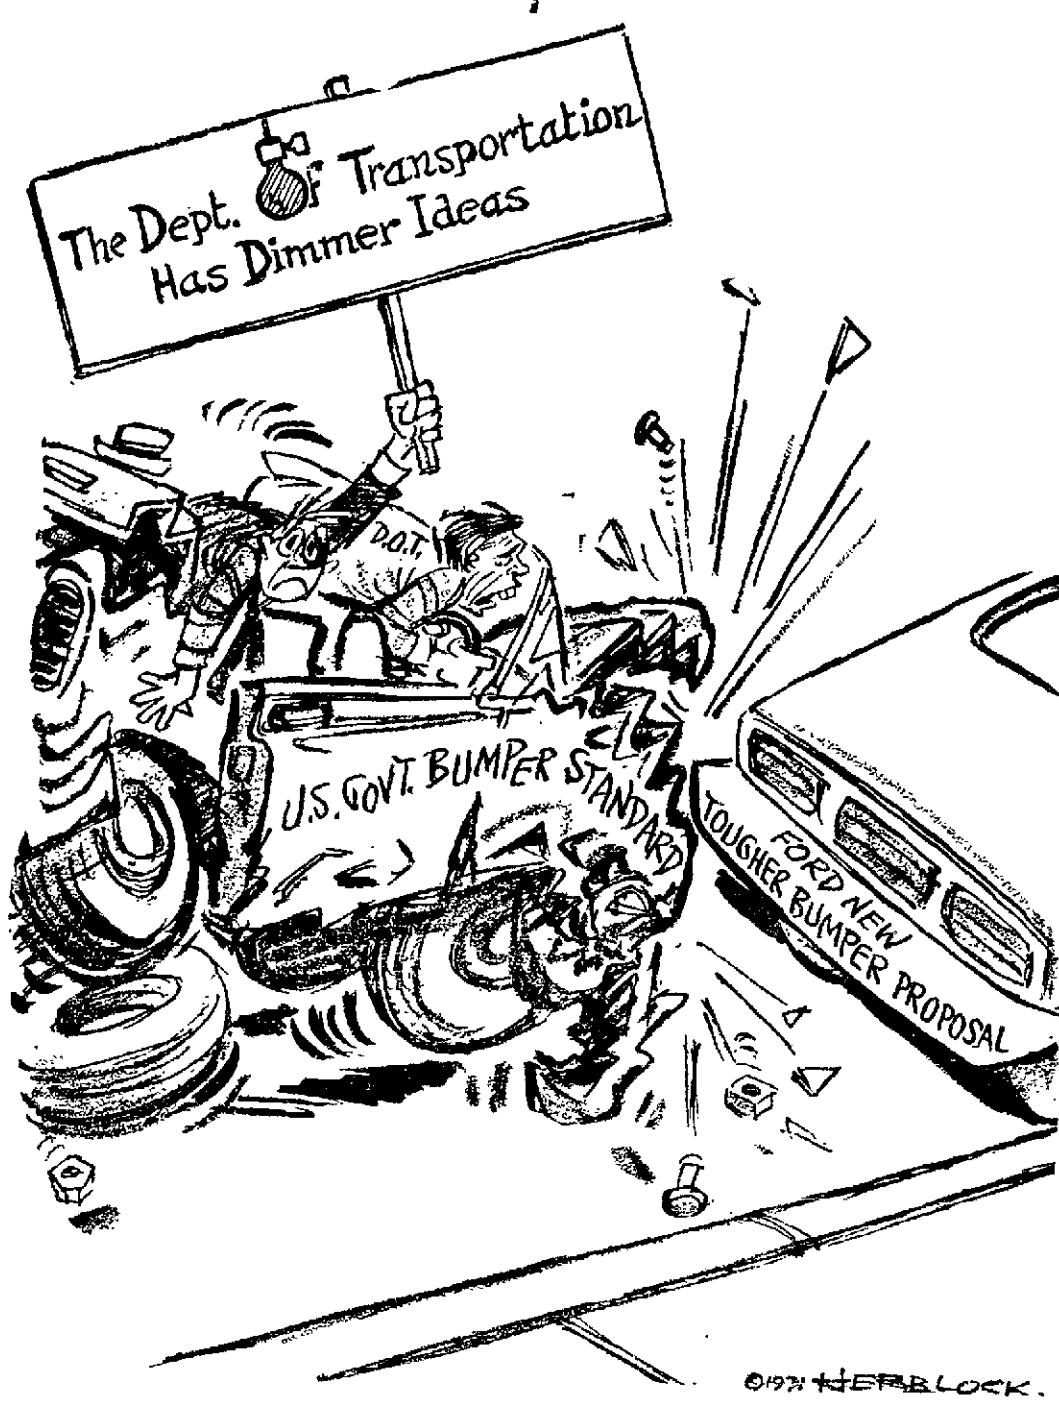

The federal government was one of their earliest targets, and they've made some headway. Nowadays it's getting harder for colleges to collect federal money for research and construction unless they can prove it's all for sexual equality in admissions, hiring and promotions.

So it looks as if the ladies are finally furnishing the answer to that question mates have been asking: "What in the world do they want?" Cold cash, podner, cold cash.

However, they still have a little missionary work to do in their own ranks. One of their Florida chapters recently raised money for a "get-women-out-of-the-kitchen" campaign . . . by holding a bake sale.

Governor Keeps Promise

Reflecting upon his first five months in office, Gov. J. James Exon said he feels he has kept his promise to voters. He is right. His promise was to hold the line on state taxes and spending approved during the recent session of the Legislature is likely to call for tax rates at about the same level as they are today.

So what of the governor's political future? It is far too early to say anything certain about that because his term still has three and one-half years to run. But two things will have a bearing on that future.

One will be the state tax rate when the governor does come to the end of his term and the other will be local tax rates. It makes no difference who is governor or what the state rates do when it comes to local property taxes.

It is the local property tax that is really playing havoc with the people. It is this tax that has people up in arms and any governor or gubernatorial candidate is going to have to deal with it.

In short, even if Governor Exon held state rates at their present level for his entire term, he would face public indignation with the local property tax. This is not the injustice, either, that it might appear to be.

One of these days, the state is going to have to start providing leadership in the area of local taxes. It is going to have to try to do something to bring greater equality to taxation at all levels, including the local property tax level.

The salvation of the state at the moment is that neither its sales nor income tax are yet at oppressive rates. But the present state income tax is based upon federal adjusted net income, a basic and fundamental inequality which seriously erodes the long-term potential of that tax. The governor has kept his promise but he has not secured his political future yet.

Steps Being Taken

Statements by Archer-Daniels-Midland Co. (ADM) officials indicate that the firm takes very seriously its responsibility to clear up the foul odors emanating from the waste treatment lagoon serving its soybean refinery plant in northeast Lincoln.

"We are willing to spend as much as it takes to get the problem solved," said ADM's executive vice president, James Randall, referring to the input of high-strength wastes which destroyed the lagoon's ability to treat the wastes in a normal, odor-free manner. The company, Randall went on to say, has "a big stake here and we want to be a good neighbor."

The planned installation of a clarifier, which takes out more of the solid wastes that leave the plant, as well as the fatty oils, should solve the problem. "With all the things we have done or are planning, we do not feel now there will be a need for anything further beyond the clarifier," Randall said. "This should prevent any further recurrence of high-strength wastes from the plant."

This reassurance should be welcome news to residents of the area, who have suffered from the pungent odors at various times over a two-year period. Although a remedy might have come sooner, nevertheless, steps to correct the situation are now being undertaken.

City officials and ADM representatives agree that the ultimate answer to the plant's problem with wastes is to hook up ADM to the city's Theresa St. sewage treatment facility and that should be effected once the treatment facility completes its planned expansion.

But in the interim, ADM has exhibited its intent to be a "good neighbor," and the city, which could have taken action against the firm for exceeding waste limits in the city ordinance, has shown again that it will work with industry to solve its problems.

ANTHONY LEWIS

LONDON — Like the Democrats, the British Labor party seems to have a death wish. The notorious recent example was the period 1959-62, when at successive party conferences it publicly blew up over such issues as disarmament and nationalization, with devastating effects on public support. As Keith Waterhouse of the London Daily Mirror has put it, the party periodically "repairs to some convenient seaside resort, climbs into a lacquered box and proceeds to saw itself in half."

And now the act is about to be performed again. Barring miracles, the Labor party will divide and deeply wound itself over the issue of British membership in the European Economic Community.

An innocent outsider might wonder how that could be possible. Less than a year ago, after all, a Labor government in office was firmly pledged to seeking entry into the community. No member of the cabinet had dissented from that policy. Harold Wilson, then prime minister, had said repeatedly: "We shall not take no for an answer."

What has happened since then? Labor has lost a general

The ambition factor can be seen nakedly in the case of James Callaghan, the party's shadow home secretary. He has just come out with a broadside against British membership, saying it would cost this country its friends and its identity right down to the "language of Chaucer, Shakespeare and Milton."

Only a few years ago, while deputy, Roy Jenkins, and many of the other figures who make Labor a credible party in the eyes of the world.

But suppose the gamble works, an election is forced and Labor wins. What sort of government would Wilson head? It would be a government without friends in Europe, mocked around the world, powerless to save Britain from being ground between the millstones of the great trading powers.

If those are the prospects, surely it would be wisdom for Wilson to stand fast for Europe. If he were overruled by his party, at least he would lose with dignity and honor—and be in a position to govern effectively in the future. And he probably would not lose.

The temptation is the possibility of office. The caution is what history may say about a man, and a party, who were clever when their country was at a great moment of decision.

A year ago the prime minister said: "At the very moment when, after years of dispute, the Six are ready to sit down with us, to spurn them now would be to add a very large and significant chapter to the historical record of missed opportunities." That was Harold Wilson.

MARQUIS CHILDS

Peace, Political Slogan

WASHINGTON — But what if peace should break out? This is an appalling thought for the weapons manufacturers, the cold war warriors and even, it could be, for Democratic presidential aspirants who see a principal issue gone with the wind.

When President Nixon dramatized the recent breakthrough in the SALT talks with a personal television appearance, the effect on political opinion here at home must have occurred to someone in the White House. Here was a chief executive making good on the pledge in his inaugural address to initiate an era of negotiation as against the old era of confrontation.

It goes with the new China policy, which is a strong plus. Far from being an accidental happening, the ping-pong encounter was merely the visible sign of many months of effort. Overtures were made through at least a half-dozen private channels to Peking.

Small signs that get relatively little attention indicated early on the way the administration was moving. When President Nicolae Ceausescu paid a state visit to Washington in October of last year, Mr. Nixon, in addressing him, spoke of the People's Republic of China. American officials had hitherto designated the government of Chiang Kai-Shek on Taiwan as the Republic of China while referring to Peking as mainland China or Red China. Again in his State of the World message in February, the President gave Peking the official designation.

Chou En-lai, Peking's premier, took due note of this. At the time of the Laos invasion, Henry A. Kissinger, the President's adviser on national security affairs, stated without qualification his conviction that China would not send troops to support the North Vietnamese. He based this, prior to the invitation to the American ping-pong team, on progress made through channels in establishing a new relationship with the China of 750,000,000 as against the 14,000,000 on Taiwan.

If the administration could by the end of 1971 or early the following year get an agreement on nuclear arms, however limited in scope, and if progress continues on the China front, the President will have gained a big advantage. He can bill himself, facing November, as the peace candidate.

Even though this could come about, the anti-war Democrats will still have plenty of openings for attack. Sen. Mike Mansfield's resolution to cut the American troop commitment in Europe failed by a wide margin. But, as was aptly pointed out, he may have lost a battle while certain to win the war.

The great Barry of interest over Louis Brandeis's intimation of the possibility of mutual troop cuts on both sides of the European divide has subsided. Played up by the White House it served to head off the Mansfield amendment. Current reports are of prolonged delays in arriving at a negotiating position. First, within the State Department, Pentagon bureaucracy and then within NATO. Little hope is held out for an agreement until the December NATO meeting, with the upcoming session at Lisbon merely taking note of the desire for a mutual cutback.

Huge expenditures for new arms development and for such old-line spending as the $850 million for a third nuclear-powered aircraft carrier are another opening for opponents of the military-industrial-political war machine. Sen. William Proxmire has persistently and effectively kept this on the front burner. His hard digging to get out facts and figures embedded in the vast defense budget has paid off.

The Democratic candidates have concentrated most of their fire on the Vietnam war. They have hammered away on the demand for a fixed date for withdrawal of all American troops, differing only on the timing of the final pullout. While the polls reflect the deep concern of the public over Vietnam and the lack of belief in the Nixon program of Vietnamization, there is a risk in putting so much on this one card.

Within the administration the conviction is that the Vietnam card will not count for much by the spring of 1972. On Nov. 1 the President will announce another large troop withdrawal. Still another announcement will come in March. Then, such is the rosy view in the White House, the political opposition will be confounded and the public convinced that the Nixon policy is working. The Nixon promise of a generation of peace finds few believers. But it could be a fine political slogan for 1972.

Doubletalk

Lincoln, Neb.
The Star's May 26 editorial, "What is a Monolith?" provides us with an excellent example of the doubletalk and intellectual sloth which is at least partially responsible for the dead-end of U.S. foreign policy.

Before tackling the question of whether communism is a monolithic international threat, the writer should have gone to his dictionary, which defines monolithic as "constituting one massive undifferentiated whole exhibiting solid uniformity." Apparently he did not.

Communism is not now monolithic and probably never was. The aspirations of a peasant revolutionary in Bolivia have almost nothing in common with those of a party bureaucrat in the industrialized Soviet Union. They maintain a shaky alliance in part because U.S. military adventurism forces them to.

China's recent "propaganda barrage" has nothing whatever to do with the question of monolithic communism.

Thoughtful men are able to distinguish between rhetoric and reality, and responsible men do not confuse the two.

China spends about $7 billion a year on its military, compared to the Soviet Union's $39.8 billion and our own staggering $79.3 billion (1968 figures from an international study headed by a British economist). Yet the Star editorialist would have us imagine that China is masterminding a world conspiracy.

I stand by my original statement—that monolithic communism is a fraud maintained by profiteering U.S. corporations and political meekers—and I doubt very much whether The Star can refute it.

Backing Governor

Lincoln, Neb.
At this time I would like to express my thanks and appreciation to the governor of our state, J. J. Exon, for the new opportunity for the blind.

Something like this newsstand in the State Capitol building is just what we have needed for a long time. Job opportunities are very limited for us.

I am a member of the Lincoln Federation of the Blind, which is supporting the governor in this project.

I am happy to see a new outlook toward the blind being developed by this administration.

On Behalf Of Blind

Lincoln, Neb.
The Lincoln Federation of the Blind would at this time like to express our sincere thanks to the Hon. J. James Exon for his action on the newsstand in the State Capitol building.

This is an opportunity that the blind of Nebraska have waited for for many a year. I believe that most citizens of this state know how limited any realistic opportunities are for the blind.

The federation is very pleased to see a modern approach to blindness by the present administration. More competent governmental officials are coming to realize that blindness is just a nuisance to easily overcome, and not a tragic mental dying as so many think.

The Lincoln Federation of the Blind stands shoulder to shoulder with all of the other organizations of the blind in the state in supporting our governor.

Bright Note

Wisner, Neb.
There is always a brighter side, so cheer up.

Matters could be far worse. Save for that all-seeing eye of a Divine Providence that watches over fools and drunks, we could have a Congress dominated by the same Wall Street-oriented element we observe in the administration.

Ky Emerges As War Critic In His Bid For Presidency

By HENRY S. BRADSHAW
(c) Washington Star
Saigon — The shift in Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky's public stance, from superhawk to gadfly critic, has changed the South Vietnamese political scene four months before the presidential elections.

Ky lately has been saying many of the things that Saigon students and other demonstrators were saying during a tumultuous period last year. But his bitter attacks on the regime of President Nguyen Van Thieu have not earned for Ky the accusation of Communist sympathies, of which the students were accused.

Ky has set out to cut into the potential political strength of Gen Duong Van Minh.

Minh has tossed his gold-braided military cap into the political ring last November as the presidential candidate of being an alternative to a second term of Thieu.

— few observers see how it could get any tougher — several weeks ago, when he indirectly accused Thieu of being an "unfaithful, disloyal and dishonest" leader in whom the people have lost faith. Rampaging corruption is "an incurable disease" and "harsh economic measures" have reduced the people to misery, Ky said.

The advantages of the presidency are such that few non-partisan observers here think Thieu can lose a re-election bid.

Ky seems undaunted by this opinion. His conversion into an active political candidate has been so quick, however, that a reconversion into another role is possible before the October voting.

Ky's criticism reached a peak nored them once he gained office. Few observers think the generals could arrange another election compromised between Thieu and Ky.

Ky apparently decided about February to challenge Thieu in the Oct. 3 polling.

Thieu left Ky uncertain about his political plans at that time, and he then launched the invasion of southern Laos without consulting his vice president. Ky immediately became a critic of the operation.

Warnings Justified

The fact that Ky's warnings about the dangers of the invasion were amply justified by the North Vietnamese counterattack did nothing to improve relations between the two.

Steel Industry Warned On Wage, Price Hikes

(c) Washington Star
Washington — The White House warned the steel industry Tuesday against following a wage and price increase pattern announced Monday in the aluminum industry.

The aluminum settlement provides that 30,000 workers in the industry will receive pay raises of about 31% over the life of a new three-year contract. Along with that, the Aluminum Company of America announced that it would raise the prices of nearly all fabricated products by an average of 6% starting Sept. 1.

people." He said Nixon is disappointed with the decision.

6% Level Sought

"The President felt this is part of a pattern that must be broken to regain price and wage stability," Ziegler said. The administration seeks to keep pay raises at about 6%.

Ziegler said he was not implying a threat of federal intervention, but made it clear that his comments were intended as a White House warning against steel workers and steel companies following the pattern. Steel contracts expire Aug. 1.

for can, aluminum and steel workers.

Officials of the union have said they would not accept contracts in copper and steel that are not at least as much as those won in the can and aluminum industries.

Ziegler said the administration feels that many times wage and price increases injure both the companies and the workers who receive them. He said this could be especially true in the steel industry which is facing competition from substitute products as well as from foreign imports.

Caution Urged

"Our feeling is that industries such as steel, which are vulnerable to competition, should be very cautious in following patterns of other industries, such as aluminum, which do not necessarily have the same problems," Ziegler said.

There have been hints that the administration would use import control powers as leverage to limit steel settlements.

The press secretary said further that the White House is "concerned about the wage and price spiral."

Vets Group To Support Viet Policy

(c) Washington Star
Washington — A group of Vietnam veterans Tuesday announced the formation of a national organization to support President Nixon's policy in Southeast Asia and to counter publicity gained recently by anti-war veterans.

Bruce N. Kesler, a 23-year-old Marine veteran from Brooklyn, N.Y., said the new organization represents the "great, great, overwhelming majority" of 2.5 million U.S. servicemen who have served in Vietnam.

Known as Vietnam Veterans for a Just Peace, the organization has signed about 5,000 members since early May, when the idea for the group was conceived, Kesler said.

The group is not affiliated with any established veterans organizations, he said, although some individuals are members of those groups. Planners of the new group did not consult any officials of the Nixon administration before organizing, Kesler added.

At a news conference attended by 10 veterans, Kesler and several others repeatedly attacked Vietnam Veterans Against the War. Kesler said VVAW activities have put the role of American soldiers in Vietnam "in the worst light." But, he added, "we know better. We've been there, too."

Social Security Measure Is Facing An Explosive Session In Congress

Washington (AP) — There's a fiscal and political time-bomb ticking in the Social Security-welfare bill the House takes up this month: an explosive 86% increase in the payroll tax over the next six years.

The maximum Social Security tax being withheld from the pay of any employee this year is $405.80. If the bill becomes law, by 1977 the maximum would be at least $754.80, in all probability more. The employer pays a matching tax.

For some low and moderate-income families the payroll tax by 1977 could be a burden comparable to, or even greater than, the income tax.

If the prospect worries you as an employee, or employer, it also worries members of Congress, some of whom are already talking of a tax-payers' revolt.

Fate Is A Question
There isn't enough opposition building up to stop the bill in the House, but its fate in the Senate is a question.

The problem for Congress is whether the Social Security system, now covering 27 million Americans and steadily expanding both in level of benefits and number of recipients, can indefinitely be financed entirely by a tax on payrolls. The alternative is to dip into general revenue funds.

There was a move within the House Ways and Means Committee this year, led by Rep. James A. Burke, D-Mass., to couple benefit increases with a measure of Treasury financing. It never got off the ground, but committee members say privately that, perhaps sooner than later, the issue will have to be faced.

The issue is, in fact, as old as Social Security itself. At the beginning, 36 years ago, a three-way split of the cost was proposed: contributions from employees, employers and the Treasury. But Social Security then was to many a radical idea and President Franklin D.

Roosevelt decided the plan had a better chance of winning congressional approval if it was self-financed.

After all, the maximum yearly payment at the start was only 1% of a wage base of $3,000: $39 from the employee and another $30 from his employers.

Increases Matched
Ever since Congress has stuck to the concept of self-financing, increases in benefits were matched by increases in tax rates and the wage base on which it is assessed.

One of the bigger boosts accompanied medicare in 1965, and now the rate has reached 5.2% on a wage base of $7,800, for a $405.80 maximum payment.

The pending bill provides a 5% benefit increase in 1972, with a tax rate of 5.4% on a base of $10,200, for a maximum payment of $468. By 1977 the rate would be 7.4%, the base still $10,200 and the maximum $754.80.

But the bill also provides for automatic benefit increases when the cost of living rises as much as 3% in a year, to be matched by corresponding increases in the wage base, so, almost certainly, the $754.80 top will be exceeded by 1977.

True, the higher payroll taxes translate partly into higher benefits; a young worker starting his first job stands to qualify eventually for a much higher pension than his father, just now turning 65.

But the drain from earnings is highly visible on the paycheck stub when benefits are in the remote future to many.

Backlash Feared
So some congressmen fear a backlash from their constituents. Also, they ask, will employers eventually hesitate, because of the tax, to hire more workers?

Then there are considerations of principle. One of the most popular theoretical arguments against relying entirely on the payroll tax is made by those who describe it as regressive: falling more heavily in proportion on low and moderate earnings than on higher ones, just the opposite of the income tax.

Next year, if the House bill passes, anyone earning $10,200 or less would pay payroll tax on all his earnings. Those earning $20,400 would pay on only half theirs, those earning $30,600 on only one-third and so on.

Again unlike the income tax, the payroll levy starts with the first dollar earned. There are no exemptions, no deductions, and a man supporting a family pays as much as an unmarried worker.

Defenders of the present arrangements argue that once a precedent of dipping into general Treasury funds is set, there will be no resisting the pressure for higher and higher benefits.

They note that the government consistently runs general fund deficits, and ask where is the money to come from?

Furthermore, they recall that Social Security initially was advocated not as a complete retirement system but only as a form of insurance against absolute need in old age or disability, to be supplemented by private pension systems and personal savings.

While a higher-paid employee is taxed on less of his earnings, they argue, it is also true that his eventual benefit is only in proportion to what he has paid, not what he has earned.

So far, the self-financing arguments have handily prevailed. The next six years, however, will provide a real test.

★ ★ ★ Social Security Checks In Mail With 10% Increase

Philadelphia (AP) — The first Social Security checks to include the 10% benefit increase signed into law by President Nixon last March were turned over to the Post Office Tuesday for delivery to Social Security beneficiaries June 3.

In a brief ceremony Robert Langdon, Director of the Philadelphia Treasury Disbursing Center, turned over 4,400 mailbags containing 9½ million checks totaling over $1.2 billion to Philadelphia Postmaster Vincent J. Logan.

The monthly increase in Social Security benefits amount to over $270 million, raising the total monthly rate of payments to $2.9 billion. Over 26.2 million men, women and children are now receiving monthly retirement, survivors or disability insurance benefits.

Since the increase was retroactive to January, separate checks will be mailed representing the additional 10% for the first four months of the year. They are scheduled to reach beneficiaries on June 22.

Charles Evers To Enter General Election As Independent

Jackson, Miss. (AP) — Charles Evers, the first black gubernatorial candidate in Mississippi history, announced Tuesday he would run as an independent in the Nov. 2 general election rather than enter the Aug. 3 primary of the state's regular Democrats. Evers, a Loyalist Democrat leader recognized by the national party as national committeeman, told a news conference, "I refuse to run under the banner of the Mississippi regulars..."

Regular Democrats are the party of the state's congressional delegation. The predominantly black Loyalists were recognized as the official Democrats in the state at the 1968 National Democratic Convention and were seated in stead of the regulars. Evers said the decision to run as an independent was, in effect, made for him by Mississippi Secretary of State Heber Ladner.

"He gave me no choice other than run as a Loyalist independent." He said Loyalist officials had sought to file qualifying papers with the secretary of state last week but could not get them accepted. Ladner denied knowing of an attempt to qualify last week.

Business Will Spend Less For Plant And Equipment

Washington (AP) — Despite President Nixon's effort to spur investment, U.S. businessmen say they will increase their spending for plant and equipment by the smallest percentage in a decade, a new government survey indicated Tuesday.

The Commerce Department and the Securities and Exchange Commission said the survey showed businessmen expect to spend 2.7% more for new plant and equipment this year. The increase compares with a 5.5% advance in 1970 and an 11.5% boost in 1969.

If the projection holds true, it will be the smallest boost in business investment since 1961, when capital spending showed a decline.

The survey was released as the Nixon administration prepared final regulations granting business a multibillion-dollar tax break in the form of faster tax write-offs for depreciating equipment and machinery.

Nixon proposed the liberalized depreciation allowances in January, saying the new plan would increase investment, create jobs and help expand the economy.

But the survey indicates businessmen are not ready to step up their spending because of the new depreciation system.

The survey said manufacturers expect to spend more than 4% less to improve their plants in 1971. In the non-manufacturing area, a 7.3% boost is projected.

Parents Warned Mini-Bike Riders Not Protected

New York (UPI) — The insurance industry Tuesday warned parents in New York that if their children get hurt riding powered mini-bikes they probably are not protected by insurance.

The Insurance Information Institute said the craze for the midget motorcycle is causing headaches because parents do not realize this.

Children on mini-bikes may be covered by family insurance policies if they do not stray off their parents' property. But the minute they get off the home base, they are operating a motor vehicle outside the law and this normally voids any insurance protection. This is true when the mini-bike is operated on a big deserted parking lot, for example.

A mini-bike is legally a motorcycle in many states and requires both vehicle registration and an operator's license to be used legally and to be eligible for insurance protection.

Sunny days. I drove into the local gas station with just enough money for two gallons — the needle was jumping on "Empty."

They pumped the two gallons. Washed the windshield. Checked the oil. The batteries. The water level. Gave me Blue Chip stamps, a free road map and a chance on a new Ford.

No other land has so much free as the American highway. Competition is high. If you shop carefully, you can almost drive away with a gas station.

Well, here we are in the blooming days of June. Science is after those poor suffering laboratory rats again.

They developed a strain of rats who were prone to alcohol. Then they developed some who were prone to detest the stuff. That is, the first bunch were lusher. The second group were wowsers.

Now they took young lush rats and had them raised by wowser mothers. And they took wowser young and gave them to rat mothers who were constantly nipping the cooking sherry.

The idea was would the young rat follow in the footsteps of his foster mother?

"No," said the professor. (This interview took place at the Disneyland Hotel. I've been wondering if it's a put-on.) "No," he said. "Apparently resistance and susceptibility are genetic and hereditary."

The professor said this proves you can't treat drinking problems with psychology. If you are a three-martini person, it's the kind of person you come from.

(Not reporting this socially. I'm just sorry for the rats. What a beating!)

AP dispatch this morning that Smokey the cat has returned home in Worcestershire, England.

Gone six years. Disappeared one spring evening in 1965. Now Smokey is back. Walked in one evening. Drank a little milk and curled up in his favorite chair. No explanations.

Point is, Smokey lives in Leek Wooton. Maybe he told people when he was lost that he lived in Leek Wooton. Nobody would believe there was such a place. They would think the cat was putting them on.

Our own Siamese has been gone about six months. I see her occasionally on the street. An independent animal. She simply moved in with neighbors who suited her better — and after I'd given her the best years of my life.

Suddenly after many cats and kittens, we are down to one Mame. Very quiet around here.

The highway is full of free things: "Free TV!" "Free Garage!" "Complimentary continental breakfast!" It's hardly worthwhile to stay home. Look at all you might miss.

The gasoline man said: "Your oil's OK."

I said: "When do you give away the new Ford?"

He said: "That's next week."

I said: "How about that one?" The sign said: "Free Nylons."

He said: "That was last week. I keep forgetting to take the sign down."

(Too late or too early. It's my trouble.)

I met a man with an interesting job the other night. He works for a vegetable seed company. He said: "We have to be careful in our growing fields that other strains don't cross with ours. My job is to go around to all the housewives in the neighborhood. Find out what they're planting in their backyard."

"Then I talk them out of it."

How? "Well, if they're planting cantaloupe, it might cross with ours. I offer to give her all the cantaloupe she wants all during the season."

Staff Cuts For Local Draft Boards Announced

By United Press International
State Selective Service Director Col. Lee Liggett said Tuesday administrative help for local draft boards has been "drastically" cut back.

Liggett reported as of this week, two full-time positions in the Douglas County draft board office have been dropped.

In addition, he said, several people in the system have been cut back from full to part-time, while others are working only a few hours a month.

"We have had to drastically cut back administrative support for the boards," Liggett said.

Primary Reason

The primary reason is based on the amount of money budgeted for the Selective Service System nationally, he said. And he noted the system spends "92% of its money on help 'so you know where the cuts are being made.'"

However, Liggett said, the cutback is not connected with the consolidation of local draft boards plan announced in April.

That program, he said, appears to have been scrapped.

The House passed the draft bill, but he said the final version carried an amendment which would prohibit consolidation of administrative help for local boards. The Senate version is due out this month, Liggett said, but added "sentiment is strongly" against consolidation and it would probably not be included in that version of the bill.

Original Goal

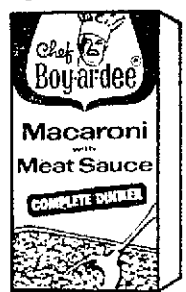

Originally envisioned in the consolidation move, Liggett said, was not only economy within the Selective Service System, but a centralization of the draft over a period of time.

Had the move been given congressional approval, he said, Nebraska would have had 23

"administrative sites," which would have handled records for all of the local draft boards in the state.

The boards would not have been consolidated as far as their actual function is concerned, Liggett said, but they simply would not have had an office at the county level in some areas.

Morning Ceremony Is Solemnized

The wedding of Miss Mary Essay, daughter of Michael Essay, Sr., of Alliance and the late Mrs. Essay, and Ronald Zimmerman, son of Ben Zimmerman of Gothenburg and the late Mrs. Zimmerman, took place on Saturday morning, May 29, at St. Mary's Church. The 10 o'clock ceremony was solemnized by Msgr. John J. Flynn.

Allice, floor-length frocks in shades of yellow and avocado were worn by the attendants, including Miss Margaret Essay of Alliance, who was her sister's maid of honor; and bridesmaids Miss Jean Essay, Miss Joan Essay, and Miss Judy Essay, all of Alliance. Each carried a single long-stemmed yellow rose.

David Klippenstein served as best man, and the groomsmen and ushers included Michael Essay, Jr., and Perry Johnston, both of Alliance; and Ken Barbee, Mike Griebel, and Ed Koahn.

The bride appeared in a gown fashioned of Chantilace. Bands of satin accented the oval neckline and cuffs of the full-length sheer sleeves. Beneath the empire bodice, the skirt was softly gathered into an A-line silhouette, and was completed with a chapel length train. A bandeau of petals and pearls held to the head her train-length veil of illusion which was edged with the lace and she carried a bouquet of yellow roses.

Following a wedding trip to Estes Park, Colo., Mr. Zimmerman and his bride will reside at 2912 N St., in Lincoln.

The bride is careering at Lincoln General Hospital where she is a licensed practical nurse.

Mrs. Riggle Is Speaker

Guest speaker at the annual public affairs dinner of the Soroptimist Club of Lincoln was Mrs. Catherine Riggle, Lincoln policewoman.

Mrs. Riggle's topic of discussion at the dinner on Friday evening, May 26, was the changing picture of law enforcement. She discussed the many aspects of police work, and the future of women in professional positions of law enforcement.

The annual meeting was held at Hotel Radisson-Cornhusker.

Junior League Signs $25,000 Pact

Members of the Junior League of Lincoln presented a universalized IOU to Lincoln Community Playhouse Building and representatives as they signed a 20 year agreement for rental of space in the theatre now under construction.

The contract was signed at the Junior League's last meeting of the season, and called for payment of the $25,000 pledge over a five year period. The agreement includes a provision that the League will be represented on the board of directors of the playhouse.

According to Junior League immediate past president Mrs. George Lewis, Jr., "We consider this new arrangement with the playhouse an ideal solution for our needs." The present headquarters of the organization is inadequate, Mrs. Lewis stated, and the possibility of housing League offices in the new city has been under consideration for some time.

The new offices will be in a separate suite on the second floor of the building which is located at the corner of 56th and Normal. Completion is hoped to be near the end of the year.

The Junior League pledge rings the total building fund edge to $375,000, according to Mrs. Davidson, solicitations chairman. The original goal was $50,000.

Other business of the day included presentation of new Junior League officers. Mrs. Ely C. Feistner, president of Chapter GD, was turned over the gavel to her successor, Mrs. Eames Irvin, and the other new officers included: Mrs. Donald Endacott, vice president; Mrs. J. William Peterson, corresponding secretary; Mrs. William Griffin, recording secretary; and Mrs. Ely Roper, treasurer.

Mrs. Thomas Lawrie was presented as the new president of the League's sustaining members, succeeding Mrs. Thomas Laidwick. Secretary of

PEO Group

The Morgan Cup is a famous piece of cameo glass from the Roman Empire, the first to the third century. It was free blown and has white overlay that was cut away to leave the design. Later cameo glass used this same method.

By RALPH AND TERRY KOVEL

Cameo glass is as ancient as the Romans and as new as the 20th century. This beautiful form of glass has been made by a similar method for centuries. Only the decorative motifs have changed.

Stone cameos were popular in ancient Rome. Glass copies were made by the first century. Larger vases were made with the same style of cameo cutting of the glass, one layer over another. The most famous early cameo vase was the Portland vase. It was copied in 19th century England by Josiah Wedgwood.

The finest cameo glass of the past 100 years was made by John Northwood of England. His copies of the Portland vase originally sold for over $5,000. The ancient cameo glass and the first English cameo glass were carved by hand. A new method of engraving by wheel was developed about 1880.

The French art nouveau cameo glass used the newer method and a partial molding process on some pieces. The art of cameo glass began to fade and cheapen by 1900. Imitations made by firing or acid cutting lowered the quality.

Q. You wrote about Dickensware pottery and mentioned that it was made by the Weller Pottery Company of Zanesville, Ohio. I own some Dickensware marked Royal Doulton, England.

A. Both factories made a series of wares called Dickensware. Charles Noye of the Royal Doulton Factory introduced his series in 1906. It pictured the characters and events from various novels of Charles Dickens. The pieces were made at moderate prices for large scale production. They had a glaze and design that was better than most wares of the same type. The series was popular in England, United States, Canada, Australia and New Zealand.

Q. What is a "chatelaine"?

A. The Victorian woman wore chatelaines as a form of jewelry. It was a pin with several chains attached. Each chain held a useful object. A sewing chatelaine held scissors, ruler and a thread case. A household chatelaine might have held a perfume bottle, keys and eye glasses. A few special chatelaines held watches. Some were used to clip to the bottom of a skirt so it could be pulled up on a wet or dirty street.

Q. Three men on bicycles are pictured on my old ad card labeled "The Graces of a Bicycle". At the bottom it says "Copyright 1880 by Currier and Ives, N.Y." At the top it says "Smoke Fair Deal". Did Currier and Ives make advertising cards or did an ad card company use their design?

A. The firm of Currier and Ives printed a small sized picture (about 8 inches by 12 inches) called the Graces of a Bicycle. They made the same picture in postcard size. The cards were used by merchants as advertising give aways. About 100 Currier and Ives trade cards are listed. Most of them date from the early 1880s. The pictures were sold with a space left for the merchant's name and message to be printed.

ABBY

talk with a doctor

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I get along fine, but I have a problem I can't talk to anyone about because this is a small town and if this ever gets out it might hurt him in a business way.

I've heard about some people having far-out hang-ups on sex, but listen to this: My husband gets excited if he can pretend that some part of his body is missing. One time he wants me to pretend that one of his legs is missing. Another time he pretends that one of his fingers is missing. Lately he asks me to pretend that one of his eyes is gone? He feels no guilt or shame when he asks me to go along with this pretending game.

I don't know why he should get turned on by pretending that a part of his body is missing, but he does. I find this weird and sometimes frightening. I never have refused to play his game for fear his mind will snap and he will harm me: Do you think he's dangerous? Ask one of your doctor friends and let me know.

DEAR WORRIED: Fetishes (and this is one) are usually harmless if both parties derive a mutual enjoyment from them. But if your husband's "something missing" game is causing you fear and anxiety, discuss it with a doctor and take his advice.

DEAR ABBY: My husband's sister is being married soon in another state. My husband and I plan to attend her wedding, but here is the problem. We have two sons. One is 2 years old and the others is nearly a year old. They are very active, and to say they are a handful is mild understatement. I want to leave them home so that I can have a little vacation and relax away from home, children and responsibilities! My mother has offered to stay with the boys for the one weekend we will be gone. My husband thinks we should take the boys to show them off. He says it will be "unfair" to his relatives if I leave them home. What do you think?

DEAR NEEDS: I think it will be unfair to you if he insists on taking them. And he owes you more than he owes his relatives. Besides, his relatives will look at the kids for two minutes, and you'll have to look after them the rest of the time.

DEAR ABBY: Now I've heard everything. I should think a wife would be tickled pink to be able to go through her husband's pockets before sending his clothes to the dry cleaners or putting the washables into the machine. Most women have to wait until their husbands are asleep before they can get into their pockets.

Good technique generally spades.

Good technique generally requires nothing more than simply paying close attention to the business at hand.

For example, take this deal where West leads a spade and declarer hopelessly plays the queen from dummy. Unfortunately, East shows up with the king, won by South with the ace.

It is clear that if the defenders gain the lead before South cashes nine tricks he will lose four spades and the ace of hearts to go down one. Declarer must therefore play on the assumption that he can win four diamonds and four clubs in addition to the ace of spades.

South is far from sure that eight tricks can in fact be captured in the minor suits, but he should bend every effort in this direction.

Accordingly, he leads the ace of clubs, followed by the queen. The queen is cashed first, rather than the king, in order to guard against West's having four to the jack, in which case the knave would become finessable.

But West produces the jack on the queen and South must now be careful to win the queen with the king; otherwise he will be defeated. He then takes a diamond finesse which succeeds.

Declarer must also be careful to now lead the seven of clubs, not the deuce, when he crosses to dummy's ten of clubs for a second diamond finesse. After this succeeds he leads the two of clubs to the six for the third and final diamond finesse.

As a result of his judicious manipulation of the clubs, South is rewarded with nine tricks. But if he fails to overtake the queen with the king, or later neglects to lead the seven to the ten, he goes down. He would score only three diamond tricks instead of the necessary four.

Good technique occasionally pays off.

UAW Backs Auto Industry's Position On Pollution Outlay

•The New York Times

By JERRY M. FLINT

Detroit — Does the drive toward a better environment mean even greater concentration in the business world, because only the rich can afford the vast spending necessary to create that better environment quickly?

This question is being asked by the automobile industry. And industry's position has received strong support from a pillar of the liberal community, the United Auto Workers.

At issue is a consent decree of 1969 ending a government suit against the car manufacturers. They were accused of a long-time conspiracy to delay the use of fume-destroying equipment on their cars. While the case was never proved, the car makers agreed not to work together again on the problems, ending the federal suit. But a decade ago the antipollution fight was largely a voluntary one. There were no federal laws ordering the car makers to build fume-free automobiles. Today there are such laws and deadlines.

Duplication Of Effort — The auto makes say the consent decree means costly duplication of effort, and the inability to concentrate men and money on the most promising approaches while still looking at long-range solutions.

For example, nearly all car makers have said that their individual efforts to meet 1975 deadlines for clean-burning engines meant they are lessening their efforts to develop new types of car engines, such as electric, turbine or steam.

The small car manufacturers say they cannot match the efforts of their richer competitors. Does it serve the nation, they ask, if they are pushed out of business? General Motors Corp., the richest, said it is spending $150 million this year to develop clean-burning engines for 1975.

UAW President Leonard Woodcock, in a letter to Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell, said, "There should not be competition in such vital areas as human safety and pollution control. There should not be an added profit for those who can best cut corners and save in these areas."

In calling for a combined industry-wide effort, which obviously would violate the present interpretation of the antitrust laws, Woodcock warned that today's safety and pollution laws, "born of a genuine concern for the health and safety of all people, threaten the jobs upon which our members and their families depend and the economic health of some of the smaller manufacturers."

Gerald Meyers, an American Motors Corp. vice president, said: "We stand on a modest financial base (American Motors lost $56 million last year) and we depend upon our industry partners as well as suppliers for some of our technology and parts supply."

Now we are virtually left on our own, to swim or sink."

John Riccardo, president of Chrysler Corp., said: "Certainly we can re-examine the competitive instinct and re-evaluate the antitrust ruling so that we can encourage the sharing of the information among competing companies when our health and safety are concerned."

Ruckelshaus Not Sold — William Ruckelshaus, administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, charged with the cleaning of the land and air, heard the car makers' arguments a few weeks ago but was not completely convinced. He suggested the possibility that a small competitor, working alone, might solve the problem of pollution with a new invention or device.

In the background is the fear that a united industry would have a convenient excuse for stalling, for all would be saying the same thing — it can't be done — just as the car makers were arguing a decade ago when the government charged that they were conspiring to delay the cleaning of the car engine.

Under the present consent decree with the government, one car maker can buy any particular device from another. But the addition of a catalytic converter to kill fumes, or protective bumpers to lessen crash damage, may mean two years of work before such devices appear on the production automobiles.

The issue is now before the Justice Department. It would be ironic if the antitrust laws were a lever that delayed a cleaner world and lessened competition.

WOUNDED IN SNUOL BATTLE . . . Viet soldiers await evacuation.

Retreat Said Planned Maneuver

Saigon (AP) — A bloodied South Vietnamese task force regrouped near the Cambodian border Tuesday after abandoning tons of equipment in a retreat from the strategic crossroads town of Snuol.

South Vietnamese officials described the withdrawal as a planned tactical maneuver.

Field reports said about 80 vehicles, including tanks, armored personnel carriers, jeeps, trucks and tons of other equipment were left behind after nearly six days of fighting that left an estimated 900 dead or wounded on both sides.

South Vietnamese military spokesmen in Saigon admitted to the loss of some vehicles, but said the withdrawal from the rubber plantation town was planned in advance because of the rainy season. They claimed about 700 enemy killed by U.S.

and South Vietnamese air strikes while the task force retreated. Field reports put South Vietnamese losses at 200 killed or wounded.

The loss of Snuol 90 miles north of Saigon dealt a serious setback to the South Vietnamese and their commander in Cambodia, Lt. Gen. Nguyen Van Minh, who said last week his forces were stopping border infiltration from the area.

In Washington, Pentagon spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim said the withdrawal "appears from here to be in order and according to their plan." He said the South Vietnamese intended to withdraw some of their combat units with the advance of the rainy season, now beginning.

A broadcast by the Viet Cong radio quoted the Cambodian Communist news agency AKI as saying the South Vietnamese were ambushed after abandoning Snuol and suffered 1,500 killed or wounded.

Da Nang Shelling Protested

Saigon (UPI) — The South Vietnamese government sent a note to the International Control Commission Tuesday protesting the shelling of Da Nang last Sunday in which 12 civilians were killed, 11 wounded and four houses destroyed.

The government said in a statement that "having to confront the armed forces of the Republic of Vietnam, which are growing in strength every day, and the South Vietnamese people's anti-Communist determination, which is becoming firmer and firmer, the North Vietnamese Communist military offensives had to cowardly resort to indiscriminate shelling attacks on populated areas."

The commission was set up under the Geneva Conventions to handle civilian complaints growing out of the Indochina War.

Pentagon Considers Major Changes In F14 Contract

•The New York Times

By William Beecher

Washington — Top Pentagon officials are considering major changes in a contract for the development and production of a new Navy swing-wing fighter, the F14, said to be beset by cost and technical problems.

The Pentagon disclosed Tuesday that Deputy Defense Secretary David Packard had directed Secretary of the Navy John H. Chafee to review the problems encountered by the plane's builder, the Grumman Aerospace Corp. Chafee was urged to make recommendations on what should be done within the next few weeks.

Pentagon officials acknowledged that if a decision is made to markedly cut back the F14 program, this could have long range employment implications at Grumman's plant in Bethpage, N.Y.

"Some Urgency"

Jerry W. Friedheim, deputy assistant secretary of defense for public affairs, in revealing the move, said that Packard considered the matter of "some urgency." If changes are to be made that would affect the Pentagon's budget request, he said, Packard wants to deal with them promptly and inform Congress.

Other defense sources said that Packard had been unhappy with the Grumman contract, which was awarded during the last days of the Johnson administration but not formally signed until just after the Nixon administration took office.

The deputy secretary, the sources said, would have preferred an arrangement similar to those for the Air Force's B1 bomber and F15 fighter under which the government signed only for prototypes, deferring production decisions until after the planes were successfully developed and test flown.

No Advance Seen

Some aides have told Packard that in their view the early version of the Grumman plane, the F14A, powered by currently available Pratt & Whitney engines, might not represent an advance over the Navy's current F4 Phantom fighter significantly great to justify its cost of $11.5 million each

An advanced version, the F14B, would use a more powerful Pratt & Whitney engine being developed jointly with the Air Force, which plans to use it on its F15, they noted.

Officials said that one option would be to rewrite the contract, now calling for 38 F14B aircraft, to reduce substantially the total, and to wait for the F-14B.

The Navy had originally hoped to buy 722 F14s, including 12 test models. But with the new engine, whose price is going up, too, the F14B model might cost appreciably more than $11.5 million apiece, officials said.

"The problem we got into on the C5A and the F111," one official said, "stemmed from agreeing to produce the planes before all the development problems had been solved. We'd like to minimize the chances of a repetition of such difficulties."

A congressional study group calling itself the Members of Congress for Peace Through Law last month urged that the F14 be scrapped in favor of an advanced version of the F4. It urged continued development of the F15, however.

'U.S. Mustn't Retreat Into Neo-Isolation'

. . . Minister Says

St. Louis, Mo. (UPI) — A Southern Baptist minister Tuesday told a church convention the United States must not revert to neo-isolationism and "deprive the world of the role we have been gifted by God to play."

But, the Rev. Dr. John R. Claypool, pastor of Crescent Hills Baptist Church in Louisville, Ky., said "it would be suicidal if we try to ignore our limits and go on trying to police the whole world."

"At the same time," Claypool said, "it would be tragic indeed for us to retreat back into neo-isolationism and deprive the world of the role we have been gifted by God to play."

He said churches must speak out against both extremes and follow a path "embracing one's limits and exercising one's power."

The convention, with a membership of 11.6 million, is the largest Protestant denomination in the nation.

"In terms of national development, our country stands today where the prodigal son stood in the parable, and what he went through in trying to grow up is what we are in the midst of just now," Claypool said.

"I would suggest that World War II was the moment in our history when we gathered up our inheritance and left home, and the 25 years since then have been momentous ones indeed, leading us finally to a far country called Vietnam, where the many experiences of our history have all seemed to culminate in painful coming-to-ourselves nationality."

Claypool, who is also president of the Kentucky Baptist Convention, said he grew up believing that America had no faults. He said the "myth of innocence" was shattered with the bombing of Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

"A second agent of demythologizing was the civil rights movement of the 1950s," he said. "This one hit me right between the eyes for suddenly I had to face up to the fact that all this idealism about the American dream had been empty rhetoric when it came to black people."

Japanese Claim GNP May Reach $797 Billion

Tokyo (AP) — Japan's gross national product in 1985 could reach $797 billion or 24.6% of the world's GNP at that time, the government's Economic and Planning Agency (EPA) said Tuesday.

EPA said the projection was made in a report which took three years to prepare with the aid of computers in its economic research center.

It said the 1985 GNP figure would be 6.3 times the $126.6 billion value of Japan's 1968 GNP.

Lawsuit Challenging War Is Dismissed By Court

Boston (AP) — A U.S. District Court judge Tuesday dismissed a suit by Massachusetts challenging the constitutionality of the Vietnam War, rejecting claims that the President has usurped the war-making powers of Congress.

Judge Charles E. Wyzanski cited previous rulings that Congress has participated in decisions on the continued prosecution of the war, and that "it is clear that the constitutional propriety of the means by which Congress has chosen" to act on the war "is a political question."

Massachusetts Atty. Gen. Robert H. Quinn, who filed the suit under the mandate of a bill passed last year by the state legislature, said he would appeal the decision to the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Sought Barrier

The bill sought to bar U.S. Defense Department from sending Massachusetts men to fight against their will without a Congressional declaration of war.

The state filed suit initially in the U.S. Supreme Court, but the high court refused to hear the case under original jurisdiction. Quinn then refiled the suit in the U.S. District Court.

The federal government, in arguments presented by Asst. U.S. Atty. William A. Brown, had filed a motion to dismiss the suit on the grounds the court lacked authority to weigh the actions of the President and Congress in the conduct of the war.

Wyzanski said in the five-page opinion that Congress still has the power to decide on the conduct of the war.

"It is a misconception to suppose that the authorities cited leave citizens subject to an unrestrained presidential power to wage war," he said. "On the contrary, at least more recent cases expressly state, and the earlier cases did not deny, that Congress has the power to determine whether our armed forces should be used in Vietnam. Moreover, the cases recognize the Congress has the means to make its power effective."

Order Issued

Meanwhile, in Minneapolis, Minn., a U.S. District Court judge has issued a temporary restraining order preventing the Army from sending Clifton D. Perkins to Vietnam before June 15.

Perkins, 20, ordered to report for Vietnam duty June 5, is a plaintiff in a lawsuit authorized by the Minnesota Legislature testing the constitutionality of the Vietnam war.

The Minnesota bill was similar to the one passed in Massachusetts.

Judge Earl Larson on Tuesday set arguments for June 12 on motions in the case. The Minnesota attorney general's office, which is conducting the suit for Perkins, has moved for a preliminary injunction against his being sent overseas. The injunction would be in effect until the case is decided.

The federal government has moved for a judgment in its favor without a trial.

U.S. District Atty. Robert Renner said the government has agreed not to send Perkins to Vietnam until at least June 15, but would not consent to a court order. Judge Larson issued the order anyway, without comment.

The suit brought by the attorney general's office says the Army has no right to send Perkins to Vietnam because Congress has not declared war there.

Ombudsman Already Receiving Complaints

By United Press International
Nebraska Ombudsman Murrell McNeil officially went to work Tuesday, but apparently will have little opportunity to gradually ease into the job.

McNeil, still putting away pencils, paper and other office supplies, noted 25 complaints and questions are already in his files.

The ombudsman, or public counsel, was appointed by the 1971 Legislature under a 1969 law. The office is totally funded from federal sources.

Already Used
"People are already beginning to use the service," McNeil said, "and I think it's bound to go over as people become more aware of the agency."

The Legislature accepted full federal funding for an 18-month trial period, indicating it would make a decision when that money runs out if there is a need to continue operation at state expense.

McNeil said the purpose of the office is to handle complaints and questions the private individual has about government and its functions.

Simple Referral
And a major part of success, he said, will be "simply telling people to whom they can turn for help." He said many times the answer to a problem is provided by "bringing it to light."

The office, as such, does not have any "real power" to dictate to other government agencies, McNeil said. Its "power" stems from giving the individual one office to contact, while it in turn does the legwork to get the answer, he said.

"This should be a coordinating arm of government — a conflict-resolving agency," McNeil said.

His actions should result in assuring the people the function of government is primarily for the benefit of the people, he said.

"I think this office should give the people a feeling of closeness to their government," McNeil said.

Soil, Water Board Sets Boundary Discussions

The State Soil and Water Conservation Commission will meet July 8 to begin preliminary work on establishing boundaries for natural resource districts in the state, Executive Secretary Dayle Williamson said Tuesday.

The action results from laws

Court Asked To Overturn Klatt Verdict

Attorneys for Rudolph Klatt of Broken Bow Tuesday asked the State Supreme Court to overturn his second degree murder conviction on the grounds that he was not mentally competent to stand trial.

Klatt's attorneys made the request in oral arguments before the court involving their appeal of the life prison sentence meted out to Klatt last July for the April 30, 1967 fatal shooting of Klatt's half-brother, Frank Spanel, at Spanel's ranch near Anselmo.

Following a preliminary examination, Klatt was later found by the Casler County District Court to be mentally incompetent to stand trial and was ordered to the Lincoln State Hospital.

However, the district court reversed its action in December, 1969, ordering Klatt to stand trial. He was later found guilty by the court of second degree murder.

Klatt's attorney's contended he had a history of mental illness and was not competent to face a trial. Prior to the alleged crime, he had been hospitalized several times in state mental hospitals.

Arguing for the state, Asst. Atty. Gen. Betsy Berger said it was up to the lower court to determine the legal sanity of an accused person.

Thone Is Seeking Petition Signers In POW Project

Rep. Charles Thone, R-Neb., has urged his constituents from Nebraska's 1st congressional district to join him in a petition drive to secure more humane treatment for U.S. prisoners of war in Indochina.

In his weekly newsletter, Thone said the petitions are available in his district offices.

The petition drive is part of a project conceived by the wives of six U.S. servicemen.

The goal of the drive is two million signatures that will be presented to North Vietnamese negotiators at the Paris peace talks in July.

said. "It will help government and it will certainly help the people."

Help To Both
The government agencies, in turn, could be helped by having problem areas brought to their attention, he said.

However, while the ombudsman is a problem solver, McNeil said, he's "not saying all complaints will be resolved to the complete satisfaction of the person, but many can be."

Sometimes all that is really required is an answer, good or bad, he said. As an example, he cited a case now in his file where an individual has had a series of letters from various government offices on a matter but none of them gave an answer.

'Really Exasperated'
"This fellow is really exasperated. He just wants some kind of an answer," McNeil said.

Primarily oriented to state government, McNeil said many times other levels of government would be involved, ranging from local to federal. He said that kind of situation is where "some coordination is needed."

He noted the office "does not give legal advice." Legal litigation must remain in the hands of the individual and the courts, he said, but added some cases may bring about changes in laws.

Second In Nation
Nebraska, according to McNeil, is the second in the nation to have such an agency. He said 48 states considered legislation this year to create offices but so far none have been approved. Hawaii was the first.

Other states do have similar agencies, he said, but they are handled through the governor's office rather than being a separate and independent entity.

Being independent, McNeil said, is better than being tied to an administration. He said it tends to "give the people more confidence an honest job is being done."

passed during the 1971 session of the Legislature, overhauling portions of the original, and sometimes controversial, 1969 Natural Resource District Act.

The boundaries under the 1971 revisions were thrown back into the hands of the commission for establishment, scrapping a 33-district plan which was developed last year.

13 River Basins
Under the terms of the revision, the state would be divided into from 16 to 28 districts. Originally, the boundaries were based on "common interests," but the new ones are to be based on river basin boundaries. The state has 13 river basins.

Williamson said the commission hopes to have the proposed boundaries drawn up by October, so plans could be made to get the districts into operation.

"That would give us about nine months to look towards getting these districts operational," he said.

Another change to the 1969 law passed during this year's session was to move the effective date from Jan. 1, 1972, to July 1, 1972.

Action Next Year
In passing the change, the Legislature indicated it would look over the boundary plans next year and decide whether to give them final approval.

A number of other bills to make additional changes to the 1969 law were introduced, but were held over until the Unicameral goes into session next year.

In addition to the additional proposed changes is a measure which would repeal altogether the 1969 law. It was introduced by Sen. J. James Waldron of Callaway.

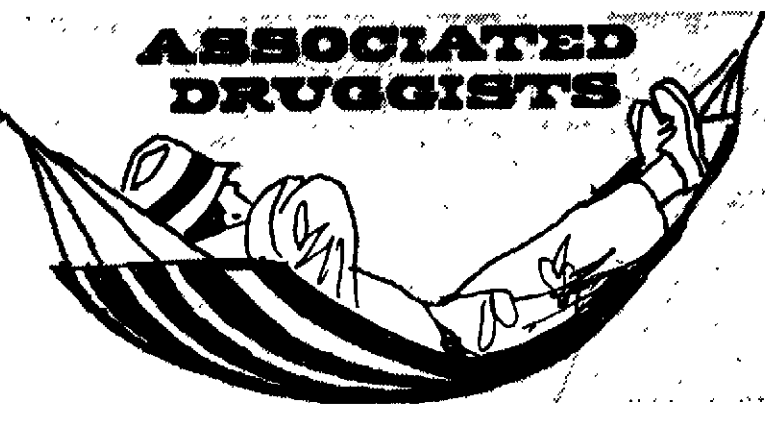

'Safety Stop' Draws 4,000

Omaha (AP) — About 3,500 to 4,000 persons used the Northwestern Bell Telephone Co.'s "safety stop" at the Greta rest stop on Interstate 80 during the Memorial Day weekend.

A spokesman said travelers from nearly every state and from England and Ireland pulled in to partake of doughnuts, coffee and lemonade. The firm has sponsored the program the last four years.

Vernon Johnson, who was in charge of the project, said the purpose was to get motorists off the highway to rest and "just take a break from driving."

Seven NU Students To Participate In Industry-University Program

Seven University of Nebraska-Lincoln engineering students will be the first to take part in a cooperative industry-university program designed to provide practical experience while the student completed degree requirements.

The first cooperative agreement for the NU College of Engineering and Architecture has been arranged with the Caterpillar tractor company of Peoria, Ill.

The seven students selected to take part are:

William B. Heming, a sophomore majoring in mechanical engineering and son of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Heming of North Platte.

Russell J. Hunzeker, a sophomore in agricultural engineering and son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur A. Hunzeker of Pawnee City.

Larry J. Kauffman, a junior in agricultural engineering and son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Kaufman of Cozad.

Dale M. Murdoch, a junior in mechanical engineering and son of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Murdoch of Murdoch.

Scott A. Noble, a sophomore in industrial and management systems engineering and son of Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Noble of Lincoln.

Roger L. Pollock, a sophomore in mechanical engineering and son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Pollock of Neligh.

Dean A. Beran, a junior in mechanical engineering and son of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Beran of Odell.

A student taking part in this type of alternate work experience and classroom education program will be scheduled to reach the goal of his degree in engineering in about five years, which is one semester longer than the present average, according to Dr. Don Edwards, assistant dean of the College of Engineering and Architecture.

The ideal schedule would have the student spending his first two years at the university and beginning his first work period at the plant during the summer after his second year.

He would work during the fall semester of his third year, return to school for the spring semester and back to the job during the summer. This same schedule would hold through his fourth year, while both fall and spring semesters would be spent in classes during his fifth year.

Late Recognition

Paris — A significant breakthrough in hydrology resulted from the observations of Frenchman Bernard Palissy, who in 1580 noted that springs and rivers take their origin in and are fed by rain and by rain alone. A surveyor and ceramic artist, he received no scientific recognition in his lifetime.

Porch Roped Off

Denver (AP) — After Mrs. Ralph Schwartz discovered a robin's nest with four eggs in a flower pot on the front porch, her husband roped off the porch until all the eggs were hatched safely.

2 Journalists From Omaha Are Honored

Two Omaha journalists have been presented Distinguished Journalists Awards by the University of Nebraska-Lincoln chapter of Kappa Tau Alpha, national journalism honorary, at the group's annual luncheon.

Stanford Lipsey, publisher of the Omaha Sun, and Paul Williams, managing editor of the Sun, were cited for creative contributions to journalism, and were made honorary members of Kappa Tau Alpha.

Ten junior and senior students in the University of Nebraska School of Journalism also were initiated.

Susan Blair, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harley J. Blair, Lincoln; Joseph Baldwin, Lincoln; Joanne Beck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Beck, Jr., Lincoln; Carol Goetschius, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John I. Goetschius, Bellevue; Cassie Hergenroder, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Spohn, West Chicago, Ill.; Stephen Paschang, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Paschang, Omaha; Mary Kay Quinlan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Quinlan, Lincoln; Deanna Sands, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Sands, Nebraska City; Elvera Sellin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. DeVere Sellin, Rochester, Minn.; Paul Virts, son of Mr. and Mrs. Don Virts, Cairo.

Undergraduate members of Kappa Tau Alpha are selected from the upper 10% of juniors and seniors in journalism.

Sailplanes Soaring

Denver — There are now 230 soaring clubs in the United States, compared with 180 in 1965. The Soaring Society of America has nearly doubled its membership in the past four years, to 10,000.

Three NU Journalism Students Are Western Writing Contest Winners

Three journalism students at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln are winners in the first Western Writing Contest, the School of Journalism announced Wednesday.

Kathy Christensen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ron Christensen of Fullerton, won the $150 first place award. Second place ($100) was awarded to Sylvia

Lee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. Lee of Crete; and third ($50) went to Judy Nelson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lester C. Nelson of Newman Grove. All three are seniors in the news-editorial sequence at the School of Journalism.

The contest, began to encourage young Nebraska journalists to write about horses, horsemanship and the contemporary West, was sponsored by a donor who has asked to remain anonymous, according to R. Neale Copple, director of the School of Journalism.

Dick Spencer III, publisher of The Western Horseman magazine, judged the contest.

New Record For Degrees Set By NU

The largest graduating class in the history of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, numbering more than 2,100, will receive degrees at Spring Commencement Saturday in Lincoln's Pershing Auditorium.

The previous record was set a year ago, when 2,010 degrees were conferred, according to Shirley Thomson, assistant director of registration and records at NU.

President Joseph Soshnik will preside at the commencement exercises which are scheduled for 10 a.m. and 3:15 p.m. The exercises are open to the public.

Chancellor D. B. Varner will confer the degrees at the afternoon program and Executive Vice Chancellor Merk Hobson at the morning ceremony.

Dr. C. Peter Magrath, dean of faculties, will be master of ceremonies. The Most Rev. Glenon P. Flavin, Bishop of Lincoln, will serve as chaplain. Music will be provided by the University Symphonic Band under the direction of Prof. Donald Lentz.

In addition to undergraduate and graduate degrees, the university will confer two honorary doctorates and five alumni Distinguished Service Awards.

At the morning exercises at 10 o'clock, degrees will be conferred on undergraduates in the Colleges of Agriculture, Dentistry, Home Economics, Pharmacy, Teachers and on graduate students in these areas.

Degrees will be conferred on undergraduates in the Arts and Science, Business Administration, Engineering and Architecture and Law Colleges and graduate students in these areas at 3:15 p.m.

Elementary Principal Switches Eyed

... PRASCH TO MAKE RECOMMENDATIONS TO SCHOOL BOARD

By MILAN WALL
Star Staff Writer
Lincoln School Supt. John Prasch Tuesday told the Board of Education he will recommend a number of shifts in elementary principalships when the board meets formally next week.

Prasch also told board members at an informal work session that he will recommend appointment of two new principals, Curtis Crandall at Clinton School and Richard J. Raacke at Bethany.

Board action is slated on the appointments at a regular meeting next Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the Public Schools Administration Building.

Now At Kearney
Crandall, 35, is now an assistant professor of education at Kearney State College. A former coordinator of elementary education at Columbus, he holds a doctorate from the University of Nebraska.

He will replace Marilyn Walters who is retiring. Raacke, 42, will replace Mrs. Evelyn Kahoa at Bethany School. Mrs. Kahoa retires this month.

Raacke, network education coordinator for the Nebraska ETV Commission, also holds a doctorate from NU.

Prasch said he will recommend the following shifts:

—Ruth A. Baethge, 53, Head Start and Follow Through Director, will be replaced by Mrs. Evelyn Nutt.

—Mrs. Gayle Heribert, 35, acting principal at Brownell since last December, will be named Brownell principal, replacing Mrs. Evelyn Nutt, who is recovering from an injury.

—Richard Spearman, 30, assistant principal at Bethany, will become acting principal at Riley, replacing Jack Dodds, and Mrs.

Ruth A. Baethge, 53, Beattie assistant principal, will become acting principal there, replacing Ralph Thorpe.

Both Dodds and Thorpe have requested half-time assignments while they complete doctoral work at NU. They will maintain some duties at their respective schools working under the acting principals.

—Mrs. Beverly Ashley, 40, assistant principal at Holmes, will move into the same position at Bethany School.

In other matters at the informal session, Prasch told the board the district will rent space next year at both Arnold and Hayward Schools to the Educational Service Unit for $90,000.

ESU 6 now operates a program for the trainable mentally retarded at Arnold School, and a vocational training program will be expanded into the Hayward Building next fall.

Since most of the program's students come from the Lincoln School District, nearly 80-90% of the $90,000 will actually be paid by the Lincoln system itself.

Other students in the TMR program come from the five-county area served by the educational service unit.

Suggestion Nixed
Prasch also said that he is opposed to a recommendation from the regional Head Start office in Kansas City that would put the parent involvement component of that program totally under the direction of the Lincoln Action Program.

The school district and LAP both operate Head Start programs.

Prasch said that organizational change might jeopardize school plans to put one parent involvement worker in each Head Start school next fall.

He also told the board Bryan School would be designated a Head Start school next fall, rather than Havelock School. Head Start classes had been held in recent years at Hayward, but the district has decided to decentralize those operations starting next fall.

At the same time, however, administrative functions of all federal programs for disadvantaged children will be centralized under Sam Nelson in offices in the basement at Elliott School.

Cooperative Jail System Proposed

A system of interlocal cooperation among Nebraska's 268 municipal and county jails to provide adequate correctional programs and services was recommended by the Nebraska

Department of Economic Development in the agency's monthly bulletin.

The publication, "Community News and Views," reported that the first step in such a process should be reduction of facilities by organizing correctional programs based on groupings by counties.

"We are not suggesting the immediate consolidation of all municipal and county jails... What we are suggesting is that counties and municipalities band together in large enough groupings to employ competent staff to supervise programs and services of a correctional nature," the report stated.

The agency report recommended counties be grouped to coincide with established regions for mental health services in order to utilize state agencies.

The report also suggested that a change in public attitude is needed in order to redefine jails as a place of correction rather than a place of punishment.

"Though our ideas about the purpose of incarceration are changing, we still design jails in the traditional manner. This tends to result in making the function subservient to the facility where in reality the facility should serve the function," the report read.

The report also noted that incarceration of the unsentenced needs closer scrutiny.

Ad For City Bus Manager Put In Industry Magazine

City Personnel Director Walt Mitchell advised the Transit Advisory Board Tuesday that an ad for a manager to operate a municipal bus system has been placed in a transit industry periodical.

The board met for its second time discussing the transition from a private to a public bus system on the assumption that federal aid funds would be forthcoming.

Board members agreed that whoever is hired as manager should be someone that is dynamic, can pump "new blood" into the bus system and has shown demonstrated success in the field.

Some of the members expressed an interest that cities which have made a successful transition from private to public bus transportation be visited to gain an insight into their operations.

Board members were also assigned areas of responsibility when are the organizational structure, acquisition of assets, accounting, selection of a manager, rates, routes and schedules, publicity and promotion and creation of a permanent advisory group.

The next meeting of the board will be at 7 a.m. on June 15.

Law Graduates Appointed Clerks

Two 1971 graduates of the University of Nebraska Law College, Stanley Talcott and Derris W. Collins, have been appointed law clerks for U.S. District Court Judges Robert Van Pelt and Warren Urbom, respectively.

Talcott, 28, a former resident of Sidney, completed his undergraduate studies in psychology at Kearney State College.

Collins, 25, from Meadow Grove, completed undergraduate work in political science at NU.

Both appointments are initially for one year.

County Board Approves Railroad Safety District

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

Lancaster County Commissioners Tuesday gave its approval to the formation of the first Railroad Transportation Safety District in the United States.

However, before the governmental unit is created, the City Council must also approve the district which will include three council members and the three commissioners on the board.

According to Lincoln attorney Robert Guenzel, the district, which is permitted by the passage of LB919, will have the authority to levy up to .75 mills and its purpose will be to relocate railroad tracks in Lincoln and provide for improved safety at crossings in the city and county.

If the City Council also gives its approval, which is expected next Monday, the district will begin operation June 21 in time for the next fiscal year budget.

Guenzel told commissioners that the original bill in the Legislature was amended after rural county residents expressed concern over the district's authority to issue bonds.

The bill was amended to provide that the district could issue bonds during the first 10 years of its 15-year existence but could not issue them during the last five years.

In other business, the commissioners Tuesday approved the supplemental budget for county welfare medical needs.

No one appeared in opposition at the public hearing on the supplemental budget of $125,000 which will be taken from inheritance tax funds.

According to Lancaster County Welfare Director J. Earle Traber, the added funds were necessary due to shortage in the budget resulting from rising medical costs and increased case load.

A $1,000 increase in the election commission office budget was also approved.

Election Commissioner Dean Petersen told the board last week that some $5,000 which the commissioners had deleted from his requested budget last year was needed to finish out the year for salaries.

However, it was found that only a $1,000 transfer of funds within the general fund budget would be necessary since the office had money left over in its new equipment fund.

The county board also approved Tuesday the installation of a flashing red and yellow light at 70th and Pioneer.

They said they felt the corner is a dangerous one where many people might be killed if some added precautions aren't taken. They also indicated that they would investigate the possibility of having the banks at the corner cut down.

Retired Officers Near Federal Civilian Jobs

(c) Washington Star
Washington — The Civil Service Commission, in a surprise move, has informed congress it has no objections to legislation that would pave the way for more retired regular military officers to take federal civilian jobs.

The measure, sponsored by Rep. Spark Matsunaga, D-Hawaii, would eliminate the reductions in pensions which regular officers take when they secure federal civilian jobs. This would encourage more of them to apply for civilian jobs when they retire.

The bill is certain to stir opposition from government employe unions which complain that too many retired military officers are already in federal civilian jobs, and that their hiring has resulted in civilians losing their jobs or being denied chances for career advancement.

At present all other retired military personnel except regular officers can receive their full pensions plus full salaries when taking federal civilian jobs. Matsunaga's bill would extend this full compensation pension and salary to retired regular officers.

Retired regular officers who take federal civilian jobs can now keep the first $2,492 of their annual retired military pension and half of the remainder.

While the commission did not endorse the Matsunaga bill, the fact that it stated it has no objection has almost the same effect.

It has not been determined when the House Manpower and Civil Service Committee, to which the measure has been referred, will hold hearings.

New Yorkers Begin Paying 7% Sales Tax

The New York Times

New York — It was grumble, grumble, grumble plus an occasional rumbling curse as New Yorkers began paying the increased sales tax Tuesday, an extra penny on the dollar.

With the sales tax reaching a record 7% on purchases within the city, a customer buying a suit at Korvette's snapped: "That blankety-blank Lindsey!"

Mayor John V. Lindsay was not to blame for this one, however. The legislature had raised the state-wide levy from 3% to 4%, and the city's existing 3% sales tax is simply added on.

Some small stores reported that customers, especially senior citizens with fixed incomes, look on the merchant, not the state, as the culprit. Generally, the higher figures on sales slips were accepted with resignation.

Higdon's Attorneys Say He Was Lucky Gambler

Huntsville, Ala. (UPI) — M Sgt William E. Higdon's attorneys Tuesday contended he amassed money not from illegal kickbacks, but by gambling — especially on a horse owned by the "Mad Greek of Okinawa."

Higdon, 41, is charged with bribery, graft and larceny in the operation of an enlisted men's club at Long Binh, Vietnam, in 1967 and 1968. His court-martial is being held at Redstone Arsenal here.

Maj. Nicholas S. Massey, a retired superior officer of Higdon, said that while the sergeant was custodian of the club he heard he won large amounts of money on horse races.

Massey said he was told Higdon won $40,000 one time on a Hong Kong horserace. The horse, he said, was owned by a man known as the "Mad Greek of Okinawa."

Massey also testified that under Higdon's management the 26 NCO clubs for which he was responsible consistently exceeded the government's profit requirements.

The sergeant, he said, worked 16 to 18 hours a day to accomplish "an absolutely impossible task."

He also testified he never had any knowledge Higdon accepted any bribes or kickbacks.

A former CID agent, William J. Callanan, called by the defense, identified statements he had taken from Edward J. Kowatch and Charles Baker in the Philippines and also checks for $5,000 and $723 signed by Kowatch and payable to George Schell.

He said Kowatch told him Schell was "Higdon's front man in Hong Kong" and that the contractor said he had paid approximately $25,000 in kickbacks to Higdon.

Callanan said he had found no inconsistencies in their statements and he would believe both men as witnesses under oath. He testified earlier for the government.

SPORT SIGNALS

By Hal Brown
Sports Editor, The Star

50 Years Ago

Omaha — Jack Dempsey was getting ready to defend his heavyweight championship against Georges Carpentier, Ed Smith was elected captain of the Nebraska track team and thoroughbred horse racing came to Ak-Sar-Ben.

Those were among the major sports stories of 50 years ago today — June 2, 1921 — as horsemen moved into Omaha for a four-day meet with the King's Derby, King's Cup and Queen's Plate being the major races in a purse schedule of $18,000.

No records are readily available on how many people showed up that first day, nor how much they bet, but a line in the Ak-Sar-Ben history book does mention that in the previous year, a crowd of 12,000 showed up for a harness racing program.

Ak-Sar-Ben conducted a harness racing meet in 1919 and 1920 before shifting to flat racing 50 years ago today.

One of the harness racing drivers, Earl Beasley, was also among the horsemen on hand for the beginning of thoroughbred racing and at the age of 84, Beasley is still training horses here this season.

One of today's races will be named the Earl Beasley Purse. Another race on today's card will honor a couple celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary and another will honor a fan, who has been attending racing at Ak-Sar-Ben since that first day.

Same Beneficiaries In 1921

Horse racing at Ak-Sar-Ben was started to raise money to fund the organization's projects — county fairs, 4-H clubs and agriculture in general.

Fittingly, those same projects are the beneficiaries of horse racing here today, 50 years later.

But while that motive has remained the same, some other things have changed. In those early years, the state didn't have its fingers in the pot and even saw fit in 1929 to ban pari-mutuel betting, not legalizing it again until six years later and in 1961, the state began taking two per cent of the betting take, a figure that is now up to four per cent.

But the biggest changes have come through the efforts of people such as Jake Isaacson and Tom Brock, former and current Ak-Sar-Ben general managers, respectively.

From that first four-day meeting with its $18,000 purse schedule, Ak-Sar-Ben has expanded to its current 48-day meeting with a purse schedule in excess of $2 million.

Ak-Sar-Ben is currently among the top racing facilities in the nation and its stakes program attracts some of the nation's top thoroughbreds to Omaha.

For instance, there's Action Getter, a Kentucky Derby runner a year ago who is now a regular at Ak-Sar-Ben after campaigning in top stakes races on the East Coast this spring.

The fact that he has had trouble winning here could be a prime indication of the caliber of horses being attracted to the Ak-Sar-Ben plant.

Ak-Sar-Ben has come a long ways since that day 50 years ago. And the big beneficiaries are this state's county fairs, 4-H organizations and agriculture, plus the state's racing fans, who have a clean, well-kept site at which to spend an afternoon.

Nelsen Decisions Dan Sauer Despite Humidity, High Temp

By MARK GORDON
Star Sports Writer

Omaha — Randy Nelsen may have been bothered by the high humidity and temperature, but his re-adjusted boxing style still proved effective.

The Lincoln fighter, who also coaches the Lincoln Saylor boxing team, earned a unanimous decision over Dan Sauer of Omaha here Tuesday night at the Nebraska National Guard Armory as Capital City boxers won two of three bouts on the season's second summer boxing program.

"It was awfully hot in there so you couldn't throw three and four punches at a time," Nelsen explained. "If you wanted to last three rounds, you could only throw one or two punches and then clinch."

Although the former Southeast District Golden Gloves champion refused to term the fight one of his better efforts, Nelsen was really never in trouble. He bloodied the Omaha's nose in both the second and third rounds and then floored him as the third round bell sounded in the clash between 168-pounders.

Nelsen said the loose sagging ropes enclosing the ring aided him since Sauer was trying to use the ropes for balance. He added: "The ropes had no

New York (AP) — Middle linebacker Jim Files of the New York Giants suffered a leg injury while taking National Guard training at Camp Drum, N.Y., this past weekend and will have his leg in a cast for three to four weeks, the National Football League club said Tuesday.

Files, the Giants' No. 1 draft choice for the 1970 season from Oklahoma, dislocated the fibula bone in his right leg. The cast is expected to be removed by the time the Giants begin training July 13.

... AK-SAR-BEN CELEBRATES 50TH ANNIVERSARY WITH TODAY'S PROGRAM

Omaha — Tiki Bill, Stormvogel and Joey Bob, the "Big Three" of the 3-year-olds at Ak-Sar-Ben this year, head the list of 22 nominees for Saturday's $20,000-added His Majesty's Council Handicap at 6 furlongs.

Tiki Bill, owned by Claude Cowan of Dundee, Tex., made an impressive 1971 debut with a sharp 6-furlong win on May 26. The colt had won six of 11 starts and $50,000 as a two-year-old.

Floyd Sluka's Stormvogel has won two straight races here, including the $15,000 Ambassadors' Handicap. Joey Bob, owned in partnership by Jack Van Berg and former major leaguer Joe Adcock, set a track record of 1:02 in winning a division of the Inaugural Handicap on April 30. After challenging for the lead in an allowance test two weeks ago, Joey Bob bled and faded from contention.

In addition to the locals, a number of imports are expected for the race which is a "tightener" for the $40,000-added Omaha Gold Cup Stakes to be run on June 26. Among the imports are W. C. Norvell's Windgusher; On The Money, owned by L. Schmidt and P. Peinowitz, a member of the Kentucky Derby field; and Sharp Man, owned by J. P. Dorignac, Jr.

Because of the large number of nominees, racing secretary Harry Krovitz indicated Monday that he had high hopes of splitting the Council Handicap into two divisions.

The 2-year-olds will be in the spotlight this week, also, with the $10,000-added Lady Sponsors' Purse for fillies scheduled Thursday and the $10,000-added Freshman Stakes for colts and geldings on Friday.

Heading the nominations in the distaff race are Patty Lou, owned by Sam Britt of Grenville, N.M., winner of an allowance test by 11 lengths earlier this season. Other nominations include Naute Haute, owned by Hoss Inman and Bud Ogden of Lamar, Colo., and Dunfoolin, owned by Frank Rust and

J. B. Hayden of Lakewood, Colo. Both have scored impressive victories earlier at Ak-Sar-Ben.

The Freshman Stakes is loaded with winners. However, Mambrino, owned by Kenneth Opstein of South Sioux City, may be the horse to beat.

Mambrino has yet to win but has found himself in plenty of trouble in his first two Ak-Sar-Ben races.

Today's program will mark the 50th anniversary of the first thoroughbred races held at Ak-Sar-Ben. A number of special activities are planned to commemorate the occasion.

CONDITION QUESTIONED

Writer Claims Horse Hurting

... 'PAD RELIEVES PAIN'

By DAVE FELDMAN
(c) Chicago Daily News

Canonero II, the Derby and Preakness winner now shooting for Saturday's Belmont Stakes and a triple Crown victory, has some new added equipment — a leather pad in his right hind foot — to enable him to train and race without pain.

Trainer Juan Arias has been screaming that all this talk about his Kentucky bred star by way of Venezuela is just a lot of rumors. At first he denied his horse had a bad skin rash and later laughed when asked about the horse's hoof.

The trainer denied vehemently that Canonero II had a thrushy foot here's the whole exclusive story, which is denied by Arias.

It was discovered last Thursday that Canonero II was bothered by his right hind leg after a gallop. A checkup revealed that the horse had thrush, a fungus infection that eats into the normal tissue of the foot, causing pus and soreness.

It is somewhat similar to athlete's foot, only more aggravating and painful because of a horse's activity and weight.

Dr. William O. Reed was called in to probe the condition. A blacksmith was also called into the case. In deep thrush cases, the blacksmith must cut into the hoof and thrush area to prevent it from spreading. The area was infected.

When the blacksmith finished his work the horse's hoof, as expected, was very tender. When Arias was asked why his horse didn't go to the track Friday and then Saturday, he raised his voice:

"The horse has new shoes. Would you do a lot of walking or running with new shoes? We have to break them in like a person would."

That is very untrue. Many horses are shod on race day and they win.

Later a plastic material with some mild, drying medication, was applied to the hoof. This plastic conforms to the shape of the horse's foot. It helps keep dirt away from the infected area.

To make sure the plastic wouldn't come loose or move, a leather pad, made from the same material as a blacksmith's apron, was used to cover almost the entire hoof.

Canonero II trained Sunday and Monday on the turf with the pad. There's no doubt the colt was galloped on the grass instead of the dirt to keep his foot free of the sand and dirt.

The skin disease that Arias said the colt developed nearing the Preakness race is coming along nicely.

But how about the thrushy foot with the newly fitted pad? Many horsemen believe a horse cannot navigate in his best style with such a full pad, although that might be the only way to train and run him without pain.

A few horsemen claim they've had horses win with a full pad, which could prevent Canonero II from being able to grab the track in the normal ways.

NAIA Tabs Bean Tops In District

Hastings — Jerry Bean, Hastings College track coach for the past four years who recently announced his resignation to accept a similar post at Western Kentucky, Tuesday was named NAIA District II Coach of the Year by a vote of the coaches.

Bean's Hastings team won both the NAIA District II and the Nebraska Intercollegiate Athletic Conference (NIAC) titles the past season.

OMAHA'S SHERO NAMED COACH AT PHILADELPHIA

Philadelphia (AP) — Fred Shero, a veteran minor league hockey coach, is the new coach of the Philadelphia Flyers of the National Hockey League.

A source close to the Flyers told The Associated Press that the 46-year-old Shero will be formally appointed coach at a noon press conference today.

Shero will succeed Vic Stasiuk, 42, who was fired by Flyers' general manager Keith Allen last Thursday.

The Central League championship went to the team Shero coached last season—the Omaha Rangers.

The Omaha position was the latest coaching assignment for Shero in a career that began in 1958, when he took command of St. Paul, Minn., of the International League.

University Gives Okay To Rodgers

Nebraska football standout Johnny Rodgers, in trouble with the law, will be permitted to attend the university next year if he receives a suspended sentence on his felony charge.

That's the word from Dr. Russell Brown, Dean for Student Development. He said a student tribunal and his staff have agreed to give Rodgers another chance if the law does.

Rodgers has admitted participating in a gas station holdup in the Capital City last year. He could receive a sentence of 1-7 years in prison.

Even if Rodgers should be allowed to attend the university, the question of whether he would be able to play football or not would be up to athletic director and coach Bob Devaney. Rodgers still has two years of eligibility left.

Rodgers is now free on $2,000 bond pending sentencing.

Blue Notches 11th Triumph

... CARDS' STRING ENDS

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Oakland's amazing Vida Blue resumed his domination of the American League Tuesday night, twirling a six-hitter as the West Division's runaway Yankees beat the New York Yankees 5-2.

The sensational southpaw, beaten by Boston last week for only his second setback of the season after 10 consecutive triumphs, notched No. 11 as the A's roge RBI singles by Rick Monday and Dave Duncan in the second inning. Reggie Jackson's two-run homer in the third and Mike Epstein's run-scoring double in the seventh to victory.

Blue, who struck out six, walked only one and retired 17 successive batters in one stretch, was nipped for runs in the second and eighth innings on singles by Felipe Alou and Gene Michael.

In other action Kansas City stunned Boston 4-2 in the only afternoon contest. Pittsburgh bombed St. Louis 9-0, Washington edged California 6-5, Houston outlasted Atlanta 7-6, Milwaukee overhauled Cleveland 5-3 and Minnesota shipped by Detroit 3-1.

Amos Otis ripped his third home run in two days and Mike Heklund spun a seven-hitter as the Royals, completing a three game sweep, shaved the Red Sox American League East lead over idle Baltimore to one game. Kansas City trails Oakland by seven.

Dock Ellis snapped the Cardinals' seven-game victory skunk with a three-hitter and capped a five-run first inning with a two-run single as the Pirates closed within 11 games of first-place St. Louis in the National League East.

Ello! Maddox, who singled as a pinch-hitter in the sixth, cracked a three-run homer in the next inning for the Senators' winning runs. Ken McMullen's homer for the Angels wrecked Dick Bosman's perfect-game hopes in the fifth.

Cesar Cedeno and Jesus Alou ripped four hits and drove in three runs apiece for the Astros. Hank Aaron and Orlando Cepeda homered for the Braves, who lost their fifth straight game and the 11th in the past 13.

Johnny Briggs singled home the Brewers' first run, then drilled a two-run homer in the sixth before Rick Auerbach's RBI single drove in the decisive run. Craig Nettles homered for the Indians.

Bases-loaded walks to Harmon Killebrew and Leo Cardenas snapped a 1-1 tie in the eighth to lift the Twins over the Tigers.

Huskies 9th On Victory Chart For Past 5 Years

New York (AP) — Winning streaks do not add up to a winning team as the National Collegiate Sports Services showed Tuesday in a review of the past five years of major college football.

Penn State managed to win 31 straight in that span and Texas won 30 in a row—but consistency gave the winningest record to Tennessee.

The Volunteers lost just one game in each of the past four years, compiling a 43-7 regular-season record for a winning percentage of .853 with a tie being figured as a half-victory, half-defeat.

Notre Dame, another streakless squad, was a close second at .850 based on its 11-6-3 performance. Third in line at 40-9-3 for .811 was Southern California, followed by Texas at 40-9-1 for .810.

Penn State's 30-10 and Ohio State's 36-9 put the Nittany Lions and Buckeyes in a fifth-place tie at .800, with Arizona State, 39-11, 780, Dartmouth, 35-10, 778, and Nebraska and Arkansas each 39-11-1 for .775, rounding out the top 10.

Now, There's An Idea

Milwaukee (AP) — The Milwaukee Brewers, their attendance lagging in the face of poor weather, announced Tuesday what they consider a sure fire way to attract area fans—cut-rate beer.

The Brewers have designated their Friday night, June 18, game against Oakland "Ten Cents a Beer Night."

Draft Beer will be sold that night at the rate of 10 ounces for 10 cents at all regular concession stands where draft beer is available and at special dispensers to be set up throughout County Stadium.

The conventional price for bottle beer at the Stadium is 50 cents for 12 ounces.

Brewers President Allan "Bud" Selig said all area brewers would participate by setting up booths.

Selig called it an example of community cooperation that eventually "will make this franchise the great franchise we know it will be."

Selig said more than 1,000 barrels of draft beer will be available to accommodate what he hopes will be a crowd of upwards of 45,000.

Meanwhile, two veteran American participants in the prestigious event—55-year-old Bill Hyndman of Huntington Valley, Pa., and 60-year-old Dick Chapman of Palm Beach, Fla.—gave way to the youngsters.

Hyndman was beaten by Hugh Campbell of Scotland 4 and 2 while Chapman was eliminated by Major David Blair of Scotland 3 and 2.

White Hyndman was beaten, several other members of the U.S. Walker Cup team advanced.

The most impressive was Tom Kite Jr., a 21-year-old Walker Cupper who is a student at the University of Texas. Kite defeated Philip Garner of England 7 and 6 and a local bookie said the 10-1 odds on his winning probably will have to be changed.

"There's so much money going on Kite," the bookie pointed out, "We'll have to change the odds."

Allen Miller of Pensacola, Fla., defeated Carl Mason of England 4 and 3. John Farquhar of Amarillo, Tex., posted a 6 and 4 victory over R.C. Beaumont of England. Jim Simons of Butler, Pa., eliminated Charles Seaver of Fresno, Calif., and 2.

Former Walker Cupper Ed Updegraff of Tucson, Ariz., posted a 2 and 1 triumph over Richard Revell of England.

Sutcliffe Gets Eagle Victory

... USES ONLY 7 CYLINDERS

Eagle — Lonnie Jensen took the high road with more power, and Dick Sutcliffe took the low road with only seven cylinders, but Sutcliffe got to the finish line afore anybody here Sunday night.

In what many veteran track observers said was the finest super modified racing program ever here, Sutcliffe, the popular driver from Kansas City, ran an unusual, but superb race before more than 4,000 persons.

It was unusual because Sutcliffe was handling a car with a broken rocker arm and a broken valve that made only seven cylinders operable.

It was superb because Sutcliffe, doing what no one else in the 14-car field dared to do, came back from fourth place by assuming a low position for the last 15 laps.

Although he started on the front row, inside position, Sutcliffe became crossed up on the second lap of the 35-lap race because of what he called "a simple driving error."

Western Union Strike Closes Lincoln Office

The Lincoln office of Western Union Telegraph Co. was closed Tuesday and the telephone was off the hook as a nationwide strike against Western Union got under way.

"I had so many calls I had to take it off the hook," Vernon Wyman, office manager said Tuesday night. "I've got instructions to keep the office closed and not accept any messages."

Nationally about 20,000 employees represented by the United Telegraph Workers and the Communications Workers of America, both AFL-CIO, are affected.

According to Wyman, only eight union members would be affected by the strike in the Lincoln area.

The local manager noted

Oleson Supports Omaha's Drug Abuse Program

Omaha (UPI) —Dr. Gale Oleson, chairman of the Nebraska Commission on Drugs, has announced commission support of the Omaha Drug Abuse Program sponsored by the city of Omaha.

The program is an umbrella organization funded by the law enforcement assistance agency of the Justice Department, and will begin in Omaha July 1.

"It is our intention in this support and endorsement of the ODAP to encourage citizens and organizations to contribute funds and time to the recognized programs," Dr. Oleson said. "By supporting this community coordinating unit, we can avoid unnecessary overlap in programming," he added.

Blue Chips Face Sizable Advance

New York (AP) — Led by blue-chip and speculative issues, the stock market made a substantial advance Tuesday. The recent sluggish pace of trading continued.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials finished up 3.84 points at 913.65. Advances led declines on the New York Stock Exchange by more than 8 to 5.

Gains were posted by glamor stocks, mail-order and retail, farm implements, electronics and building materials. All other groups were mixed.

Analysts said investors were snapping bargains that had developed after the recent decline. By the close last Friday the Dow average had fallen 43 points from a 23-month closing high of 956.82 reached on April 28.

Big Board volume inched ahead to 11.93 million shares from 11.76 million shares Friday. Brokers said many investors sat on the sidelines awaiting signs of a significant market trend. Trading has topped the 16 million share level only once in the past nine sessions.

The most active Big Board issue was Penn Central, off 1/4 at 59 on a volume of 173,800 shares. A 99,900 share block of the issue traded at 5.

Another Big Board issue on the most-active list was Greyhound, up 1/4 at 21. The rise in Greyhound stock followed news that the Supreme Court upheld the company's acquisition of Armour. The Justice Dept. had challenged Greyhound's takeover of the meatpacker.

The New York Stock Exchange index of 30 common stocks rose 0.34 to 52.76. The 1,000 issues traded 57.16. The board's 52 advanced and 37 declined. New York's daily average rose 1.1 to 312.8. Industrials were up 3.84, rails were up 4 and utilities were up 3.7. The Standard & Poor's 500-stock index climbed 37.1 to 100.20.

The number of blocks of 10,000 shares or more traded on the New York Stock Exchange rose 31 from 27 on the previous session's close.

The American Stock Exchange index rose 0.10 to 10.10. The board's 100 issues traded 10.10. The board's 100 advanced and 36 declined. Volume rose to 3.36 million shares from 3.31 million shares Friday.

Corporate bonds were mostly unchanged while government bonds were mixed.

Frontier Cancels Omaha Flight

Denver (AP) — Frontier Airlines will discontinue effective July 1 its jet flight which originates here and serves Billings, Mont., Rapid City, S.D., Omaha, Neb., and Chicago.

The return flight also will be discontinued, a Frontier spokesman said Tuesday.

Passenger traffic hasn't been running high enough to justify its continuance, the spokesman said.

College Trustees To Meet In Peru

The board will be meeting on the Peru State College campus, beginning at 9 a.m.

EVERYBODY'S MONEY: Reform Support Weaker At GM's Last Meeting

By Meryle S. Rukeyser

An important straw in the winds of sociological change is the fact that at the last annual meeting of General Motors stockholders the special reform proposals of a highly vocal group, the Project on Corporate Responsibility, owning 12 GM shares, received a smaller percentage of affirmative votes than a year ago. The support for three propositions received votes of between 1.1% and 2.36% of the total shares voted. Two of its similar proposals a year ago received 2.44% and 2.73% of the shares voted.

For these publicity seeking coal tail riders to succeed, they would need evidence of growing support. The nuisance value of individuals and groups, with a negligible stake in a corporation, to delay proceedings and cause expensive printing jobs calls for a fresh appraisal of the situation by the Securities & Exchange Commission, which up to now has promoted such antics in the name of industrial democracy. Even in analogous political halting, those wanting to run independently have to get a minimum number of supporting signatures. Some practical limits should be placed on the activities of those without a real financial stake in a company.

Although many think that GM scored a victory, the busybodies did cause James M. Roche, the chairman, to devote the meeting mainly to extraneous social debate and to curtail the time normally devoted to the financial affairs of the corporation.

Loose Talk

There has already been too much loose talk about directing the emphasis of managing directors of corporations toward profit making to social matters. This could ultimately be an RX for financial suicide, since in the competitive system survival depends on sufficiently pleasing customers to make receipts exceed expenditures.

Whether the business is run by a large corporation or by a single proprietor, the ultimate sanction for maintenance of the unwritten economic franchise is benefit to the public. When a company contributes to better living for his customers, its employees and suppliers, it is socially useful. It is somewhat of a diversion to use stockholders' funds as a symbol of social usefulness to endow foreign missionaries, for example.

The tax laws make corporate giving more attractive than individual charity, but the benevolence of management should be germane to the corporate objectives. It is relevant for a company needing engineers to make a grant to a technical college, for example.

Business Baiting

It is important for younger men in management not to be brainwashed by the repetition of canards about business. For nearly 40 years business baiting has been a political tool of life.

But let the record show that the first awareness of the social responsibility of business came from within commerce and industry. Nearly half a century

Niebuhr Dies; Mentor Of Demo Brain Trust

... HE WAS THEOLOGIAN OF NEO-ORTHODOXY

©The New York Times

Stockbridge, Mass. — The Rev. Reinhold Niebuhr, distinguished Protestant clergyman and theologian, died Tuesday evening, at his home here. He was 78.

Niebuhr, who had been under orders from his doctors to cut down on his sermons and lectures, recently sold his apartment in New York.

Niebuhr was a theologian who preached in the marketplace, a philosopher of ethics who applied his belief of everyday moral predicaments, and a political liberal who subscribed to a hard-boiled pragmatism.

Combining all these capacities, he was the architect of a complex philosophy based on the fallibility of man and the absurdity of human pretensions, as well as on the biblical precepts that men should love God and his neighbor.

Neo-Orthodoxy

The Protestant theology that Niebuhr evolved over a lifetime was called Neo-Orthodoxy. It stressed original sin, which Niebuhr defined as pride in everybody's motives, whether they are idealists or realists or whether they are benevolent or not.

It rejected utopianism, the belief that increasing reason, increasing education, increasing technical conquests of nature make for moral progress, that historical development means moral progress.

As influential as he was in the disputatious world of religion, it was in the arena of practical politics that the effects of his thought were most apparent to the general public.

He was the mentor of scores of men, including Arthur Schlesinger Jr., who were the brain trust of the Democratic Party in the 1950s and 1960s, George F. Kennan, the diplomat and adviser to presidents on Soviet affairs, called Niebuhr "the father of us all" in recognition of his role in encouraging intellectuals to help shape national policies.

Movers And Shakers

In addition to Keenan and Schlesinger, the "all" included such well-known intellectual movers and shakers as Paul H. Nitze, Dean Acheson, McGeorge Bundy, Louis J. Halle, Hans J. Morgenthau and the New York Times's James Reston.

"I suppose the thing Niebuhr has done for me more than anybody else," Reston once said, "is to articulate the irony of our condition as a country in the world today."

Niebuhr was himself active in politics, as a member first of the Socialist Party, and then as vice chairman of the Liberal Party in New York.

Firm Interventionist

He was an officer of Americans for Democratic Action and active in numerous committees established to deal with specific social, economic and political matters. He was a firm interventionist in the years before United States entry into World War II. He was equally firm in opposing Communist goals after the war, but at the same time he was against harassing American Communists.

Niebuhr had been associated with Union Theological Seminary since 1928. Many who heard him lecture on secular matters were incredulous when they found that he was a clergyman, for he wore his erudition lightly and spoke in common accents. When he preached, one listener recalled, "he always seemed the small town parish minister, able to relate the Christian faith simply to contemporary problems."

In struggle for the good, institutional change is likely to be more effective than a change of heart, Niebuhr suggested. He derided clergymen who offered salvation on what he considered simplistic terms.

Billy Graham, the evangelist, and the Rev. Norman Vincent Peale, the expositor of "the power of positive thinking," were among the clergymen Niebuhr contradicted.

Changes In Society

Niebuhr objected especially to the notion that religious conversion could cure race prejudice, economic injustice or political chicanery. The remedy, he believed, lay in societal changes spurred by Christian realism. In this sense, man could be an agent in history by coming to terms with it and working to alter his environment.

He was born June 21, 1892, in Wright City, Mo., the son of Gustav and Lydia Niebuhr. His father was pastor of the Evangelical Synod Church, a German Lutheran congregation, in that farm community.

At the age of 10 Reinhold decided that he wanted to be a minister because, as he told his father, "you're the most interesting man in town." At that point his father set about teaching him Greek.

From high school Reinhold went to Elmhurst College in Illinois, a small denominational school, and from there, after four years, to Eden Theological Seminary near St. Louis. After the death of his father in 1913, Reinhold was asked to take his place in Lincoln, Ill. He declined in order to enter Yale Divinity School on a scholarship. He received his bachelor of divinity degree there in 1914, and his master of arts a year later.

Upon his ordination by the Evangelical Synod of North America, he was sent to his first and only pastorate, the Bethel Evangelical Church of Detroit. He remained there 13 years, becoming the center of swirling controversy for his support of labor, and later for his espousal of pacifism.

He Condemned Ford

"I cut my eyeteeth fighting Ford," Niebuhr said in recollection of his Detroit years. Whereas Henry Ford was usually praised in those days for his wage of $5 a day and the low price of his automobiles, he was condemned by Niebuhr as ravaging his workers by the assembly line, the speed-up, periodic layoffs for retooling and by summary dismissal of men in middle age.

Niebuhr not only preached against what he regarded as Ford's callousness, but he also wrote stinging articles in the Christian Century that were read by Ford, who was neither amused nor converted.

All during the 1930s Niebuhr was reassessing his ethical, social and political beliefs. He has never been a thorough-going Marxist, an advocate of class struggle and revolution; and now he turned to socialism. He was never a Communist; indeed, he was a vigorous critic of the Soviet Union for the "brutality" of its economic system.

He was regarded during and after World War II as a salesman of democracy, even though he was not uncritical of his country.

"Perhaps our gravest fault as a nation," he said, "is our exalted sense of American virtue. We see the United States as something unique in the world, a nation whose concerns soar above petty national ambitions, whose generosity and goodwill are unequaled. God, we assume, is invariably on our side, thanks to a special covenant with the Almighty."

Students Told They Are A 'Prodding Conscience'

New York (AP) — Mrs. Martin Luther King Jr. told graduates at the City College commencement exercises Tuesday night that students have become the "prodding conscience" of world leaders.

The widow of the slain civil rights leader said students have become "significant political actors with amazing power to influence the course of societies all over the world."

Mrs. King said "this year the pendulum swings to an overwhelming pessimistic society," but "I have faith in the youth of this nation. For today's student is an independent individual who seeks to analyze and find solutions to our problems."

She said, "In many ways American students have now, with all their innocence and open generosity, become the prodding conscience to those in power and those aspiring to it."

Mrs. King was awarded the college's Martin Luther King Jr. Medal for "lifelong dedication to humanitarian ideals."

The college awarded 3,062 bachelor of arts degrees, 813 masters degrees, 38 bachelor of architecture degrees and 34 post master's certificates to School of Education graduates.

Mrs. King said, "Some of the Final Discussions Are Conducted By Goals, Policies Subcommittees

By IVAN TRAVNICEK
Star Staff Writer

The Lincoln-Lancaster County Goals and Policies Committee met Tuesday evening in a session at which 10 groups covering such areas as housing, transportation, education and environment held their final discussions.

The 110 committee members are charged with establishing governmental goals reflecting attitudes and opinions of the community in preparation for updating the city-county comprehensive plan.

The first phase of this objective was organization of the goals committee and an evaluation of the existing comprehensive regional plan. The second phase was a $71,800 survey conducted by the consulting firm of Leo A. Daly, of San Francisco.

Results Discussed

The third phase of which Tuesday night's meeting was a part, discussed the results of the survey.

Stan W. Ryker, deputy director of the committee, said the

24-Year-Old Man Discovered Dead In His Apartment

A 24-year-old Lincoln man was found dead in his apartment at 930 So. 16th Tuesday night by his brother-in-law, Dennis Engleman, of 1630 J. police reported.

Police said Engleman looked through a window and saw Donald Dahlberg on the floor of his apartment and called police.

Police said it was an apparent suicide from several notes left in the apartment. Dahlberg died of a .22 caliber revolver wound in the chest, police said.

Police said Dahlberg had been dead for several days.

survey so far had gotten a "mixed reaction." The housing group, however, did have some points in which they were in disagreement with the survey.

The survey showed that 61% of the people responding had an annual income of under $10,000. But the housing group said the actual figure for Lincoln is 71%.

The housing group interpreted this to mean that the survey did not reflect properly the number of people who feel there is a lack of low income housing.

Report Slated

Next Tuesday, the chairman of each group will give a report on the goals adopted by his group, which will all be assembled and published after a meeting on June 15 with William Colborn, a consultant for the firm making the survey.

The goals that will be submitted to the committee chairman, the Rev. Robert W. Jeanby, by the housing group will call for providing "safe, clean, decent, sanitary and aesthetic housing with an adequate number of single and multiple dwellings for all persons in Lincoln-Lancaster County, regardless of race, in all levels of income." And further that "all dwellings must meet minimum housing standards with adequate open space per capita."

In addition the housing group will adopt as a goal to "develop residential areas which may include as needed single and multiple dwellings, each with adequate parking and open space per capita, as neighborhood units based on the following principles: (1) area of approximately one square mile, (2) elementary school and neighborhood park as the neighborhood center, (3) neighborhood bounded by major streets and (4) through traffic not to penetrate the neighborhood."

The housing group said that Lancaster County "must" be given power to enact and enforce subdivision regulations on the order of those in effect in Lincoln. Lancaster County currently does not have that power, the group said.

Schenk Is Listed

As 'Serious' In Tractor Accident

The Lincoln YMCA's executive director was still listed in serious condition Tuesday evening at Bryan Memorial Hospital with multiple fractures and internal injuries he suffered Monday afternoon when his tractor overturned, pinning him underneath.

William A. Schenk, 44, of 6621 Rexford Dr., was working on a YMCA garden plot when the accident occurred, a spokesman for the YMCA said.

Police said the disc he was pulling clogged with dirt, overloading the tractor and causing it to overturn.

A spokesman at the hospital, however, said his condition was improving.
